RECORD!

OVALTINE

Over 430,000 cups of 'Ovaltine' were served to competitors and officials at the Tokyo Olympic Games—more than three times as many as at any other Olympics.

RECORD!

'Ovaltine' is the only food drink which has been officially recognized for serving to competitors at every Olympic Games since 1932—and at every British Empire Games since they began.

'Ovaltine' was the only product selected for serving to athletes at the Tokyo Olympics, and there were more than 40 'Ovaltine' serving points throughout the Olympic Village and competitive areas.

Foreword

By THE MARQUESS OF EXETER, K.C.M.G., LL.D

Chairman of the Council of the British Olympic Association, and Team Commandant

I am happy to write this foreword to the British Olympic Association's Official Report of the Olympic Games of 1964. Tokyo has staged the largest and a highly successful Olympics and I would like to of all members of our Association to the Organizing Committee. Our team did remarkably well. Ninety-four countries, the greatest number ever, were represented, and 11 world and 71 immensely high standards, our team was successful in winning four gold, 12 silver and two bronze medals, a great achievement. What was even more satisfactory was better than they had ever done before. To send our team to Tokyo, £150,000 had to be raised by public subscription and I would like to express our gratitude to all those whose donations assisted so generously in ensuring that a full complement represented us. This foreword would not be complete without paying a tribute to the splendid work which our Secretary, Mr. K. S. Duncan, did in making the arrangements, and also to Mr. R. G. Hinks, our Appeals Secretary, who played such an active part in ensuring that the necessary finance was forthcoming. I feel sure that the readers of this Report will

The British Olympic Association and the OLYMPIC GAMES - 1964

OR more than two years the British Olympic Association was concerned with the overall planning for Great Britain teams to take part in the Olympic Winter Games in Innsbruck, Austria, and in the Games in Tokyo. This planning raised many problems, not the least being that of obtaining about £170,000 by Public Appeal. An Airlift had to be organised, along with sea and air freight arrangements. attractive clothing provided, medical inquiries made, and a host of other administrative details dealt with. The General Secretary visited both venues to assess the problems in each, and to make suitable arrangements for the successful operation of the teams at these Games.

The thanks of the Association are given to all those who gave each valuable service. On the control of the cont

OLYMPIC WINTER GAMES

It was soon clear that the Winter Games in Innsbruck were to be organized by experts in their events, and angled not on publicity but on providing the right environment and facilities for the competitors. The only danger appeared to be the possible lack of snow. This in fact proved to be the case. but efficient planning, correct siting of ski courses and alternative courses, and the provision of a machine capable of making 5 tons of snow an hour, resulted in admirable facilities, although some ski runs might have been considered somewhat narrow and overcast. In fact virtually no snow fell during the period of the Games, which removed from the Organizing Committee the great difficulty of keeping the narrow roads to many of the venues clear and navigable

It was agreed that Great Britain should be represented by a team, and that our skiers, speed skaters and other sports, however much they might be at a disadvantage with Nordic Countries as regards training and competition facilities, should be given the honour and incentive of Olympic competition. The Association accordingly gave to each Governing Body a grant sufficient to cover the expenses of an agreed minimum number for its team.

The uniform for the parade at the Opening Ceremony was supplied to all team members mainly by Lillywhite Ltd. This consisted for the men of white nylon fru hats, brilliant red anoraks, black vorlages and fur-lined boots. The ladies had red hats and cleaks, both trimmed with fur, vorlages and boots. both trimmed with fur, vorlages and boots. Social badges were also supplied with special badges were also given these, but of a different design.

The team lived in excellent conditions in a number of flats, to be much eavilable after the Games of flats, to be much eavilable after the Games of flats, to be much eavilable after the Games of flats, with its staff consisting of the Chef de Mission, Mr. 3, Bingham Dore, the Finance Mission, Wr. 3, Bingham Dore, the Finance doctor; and Miss Susan Wallace and Mrs. Maja Parti, both of whom worked unceasingly and whose help was invaluable. The Inaugural Meeting of the Appeals Committee was held on November 20, 1963, where the overall strategy and planning of the Appeal was considered. The Appeal was further publicated and presented at the Olympic Dinner at Grosvenor House on December 11, 1963.

It was agreed that discussions should be carried out with Governing Bodies of sport, and a mutually agreed target figure be reached with each, bearing in mind the capacity for raising funds of each Governing Body. These in all should total about onethird of the overall target figure.

If was also expected that donations from commerce and industry would exceed a further third of the overall total required. Committees set up throughout the United Kingdom; functions such as dances, whist White City stadium; and the two major functions organized by this Association, which was the committee of th

Negotiations were also opened with the Foreign Office for an administration grant or donation to the Appeal. The Association was informed shortly after that a grant-in-aid of £20,000 towards the team expenses would be made, and this was followed ten months later by a similar additional grant-in-aid of £10,000.

The beginning of the end of Tokyo's preparations for the XVIII Olympiad. Yoshinori Sakai, born 19 years before as an atom bomb fell on Hiroshima, carries the Olympic Flame on the last stage of its 10,000 mile journey from Mount Olympus on the afternoon of October 10, 1964, and after mounting the steps before 80,000 spectators and the representatives of 94 competing countries, climaxes the Opening Geremon by igniting the giant bowl 19 kg, the National Stadium to begin the Games ever to be held in A&B.

OLYMPIC GAMES-1964

A powerful and successful Local Committee was set up in Scotland, under the Chairmanship of Lord Dalhousie, ably assisted by Mr. W. R. Ballantyne, Mr. J Shaw and Mr. C. N. Winter, with a target of £15,000. It eventually raised £16,200

A special committee undertook to organize The Olympic Ball, H.R.H. Princess Alexandra kindly agreed to be Patron of the Ball, and herself attended it with her husdent: and The Marchioness of Exeter again as Chairman, assisted by Mrs. John Davis as Deputy Chairman, most ably supervised all arrangements resulting in a most enjoyable and financially rewarding evening.

The Film Premiere of "Bye Bye Birdie" by Mr. John Davis (Ranks) and by Mr.

In addition a collection was taken up at the White City stadium on August Bank Holiday Monday, which resulted in a record total more donated an additional £800, based on In all, about 100,000 appeal letters, with leaflets and donation lists, were sent out. About 4,000 cheques were received and each was acknowledged individually. The final may well achieve a sum of about £180,000 and it was operated (part rent excluded) at

Again the Association investigated most thoroughly the meterological data regarding heat and humidity in Tokyo, and any prevalent diseases and ailments which might affect the team during the period of the Games. Advice was sought from The British Association of Sport and Medicine, under the chairmanship of Sir Arthur Porritt, and before competitions were required in Tokyo to offset the effects of the 28 hour airtrip and the nine hour time change.

The problem of team clothing had again to be solved. As on previous occasions, we fittings and issuing of the entire range of clothing, and the latter made up many of the garments. Miss E. Whiteside and Mr. A. Huggins acted as advisors and fashion coordinators for the ladies' and men's outfits respectively. Many other firms gave generous support by donating articles of clothing or presented the attractive pink dresses and jackets for the lady competitors, and a similar outfit in pale blue for the lady officials; of Otto Lucas, who supplied the attractive ladies' hats; and of L.C.I. Fibres Ltd., whose terylene worsted materials were not only attractive but stood up excellently to the heavy use to which they were put, as did those from acrylan, nylon, orlon and wool. The following general clothing was issued by the Men: White nylon hat with band; blue blazer suit with badge and golden cotton shirts; tie; Y-fronts and singlets; pale blue woollen sweater: lan socks; brown pigskin casual shoes; fawn nylon raincoat.

Ladies: Pink hat; pink dress and jacket in "Trilin"; dark blue Daks skirt in dation garments; orlon dark blue cardigan; white leather sling bag;

In addition many other articles were issued by the Association, including firstrate suitcases, air travel bags, tracksuits, vests, shorts, badges, peaked caps and towels Details of all these, and the firms which assisted the Association so generously, are to be found in the acknowledgements on pages 12 and 89. Their support was invaluable.

The clothing was shown to the Press on of Dr. S. Leonard Simpson. It met with enthusiastic approval, was liked by the team,

The next major problem was that of 'transport'. T. H. Hamer & Co. of 7 Haymarket, London S.W.I., were again appointed agents, and negotiations with B.O.A.C. were started in 1962. Excellent arrangements with many concession rates for sea freight were made by Mr. L. E. L. Donne, and our rowing shells, canoes, yachts, ammunition and three tons of fodder, left Tilbury on the Benlomond on August 15, due In fact the ship was delayed several days

The team travelled out in three charter B.O.A.C. Comet aircraft and homeward in two B.O.A.C. Boeing 707 aircraft. In addition 20 regular service seats were obtained

At the same time, arrangements had to be proved impracticable due to "African Horse by K.L.M. Details for the airlift and horseby Mr. A. H. Geard, who later joined H.Q. staff in Tokyo and supervised the arrange-

There were entry forms and identity cards to be completed; passports to be obtained the team handbook, presented by Boyril Ltd. be sent out to the various suppliers; continuous contact to be maintained with the Tokyo Attaché, and much other documentation to be carried out.

The Newspaper Proprietors Association again handled the 48 Press accreditations for the British Press in Tokyo. The B.B.C.-tv and the B.B.C. radio arranged for full parties to operate in Tokyo, as did LT.N. and the Consortium of Commercial TV and the TV coverage in the U.K. was first rate, assisted by the complicated procedure rendered necessary by the Telstar. It is said that daily B.B.C.-tv viewing audience between 10.30-11.30 p.m. exceeded 12 million.

The Association of British Travel Agents assumed the task of ordering Olympic tickets having been given to the members of the Governing Bodies in the early stages. As always many people made up their minds at the last moment to travel to Tokyo, when tickets and accommodation were either in short supply or unobtainable. It is clear that of tickets early on to deal with this problem.

TEAM ALLOCATIONS

The normal procedure was adopted with regard to the selection of the British team. After consultation with Governing Bodies. and in the light of our Olympic budget and the expected result of the Appeal, The British Olympic Association was able to arrive at the overall size of the team which it would be able to send.

Definite numbers for each sport were mutually agreed between the Association and Governing Bodies, and it was the responsibility of the latter to select their team officials and competitors according to these agreed numbers.

TOKYO

Mr. K. S. Duncan, Chef de Mission. paid two previous visits to Tokyo in the years 1962 to 1964. These proved invaluable in making contact with the senior officials of the Tokyo Organising Committee, and of the Olympic villages, as well as with the British Embassy in Tokyo. Resulting from these visits the team had the use of ten cars and six Tokyo car dealers; free petrol and oil generously donated by Shell Ltd; two Transport Officer working on Team H.Q. the services for over a month of twelve local residents acting as liaison officers (and named "Uncles") who were accredited as interpreters and assisted the team managers of various sports throughout their stay. All this laid the necessary firm foundation of administration which was to serve the team well during the

On September 21, the Chef de Mission, along with the team doctor and the Quartermaster, went ahead of the team, with the first main party arriving six days later. The village proved a most attractive one with bungalows and two-storied houses standing on their own, with well trimmed grass and trees around them. Once the allocation of sports to houses had been accomplished, and the H.O. office set up with sufficient phones, desks and duplicating and copy machines, we felt able to withstand the impact of 80 team members arriving early on September 28, to be followed by the same numbers arriving on each of the next few

Tokyo itself was swept with "Olympic fever". It is said that up to £300 million had been spent as a result of holding the Games. Certainly a new and magnificent road system had been super-imposed on Tokyo. In particular, the new road to Haneda Airport with its over- and under-passes, and the Monorail beside it, was most impressive, as were the countless new sports venues, including what all agreed was the finest indoor swimming pool in the world.

The Olympic Village, too, was excellent, International Club; Theatre; and the usual Bank, Post Office etc. The Japanese staff, ant Kishihara, did all in their power to make our stay a pleasant one, as also did the "Mayors" of the Olympic Village, Mr. Konatsu and Mr. Funatsu, and their staff. Our Japanese Hosts were charming and delightful throughout, and there can be no doubt as to the great efficiency with which the Games were organized.

TEAM ARRANGEMENTS

Our team on arrival found itself in five Olympic Villages. The main party was in Yoyogi Village in Tokyo, the Canocists in Sagami, the Cyclists in Hachioii, the Equestrian 3-day Event team in Karuizawa and the Yachtsmen in Oiso.

The usual pattern of life in the villages soon began to establish itself. The H.Q. lems and persons: team managers, assisted by their liaison officers organized the training tions were made for the competitions soon to begin.

A most impressive Opening Ceremony took place on Saturday, October 10; Great Britain's team in eights, headed by the placard-bearer, and Anita Lonsbrough carrying the standard, gave a good account of itself. Luck had however decreed that the effect of our ladies' pink outfits should be minimized by the German team, whose ladies were dressed in the same colour, and whose team marched into the stadium just ahead of our own.

During the Games the work of the Association was carried out by the Headquarters Staff in the Yoyogi Village. The Chef de Mission was under considerable pressure throughout the Games, assisted ably by his deputy, Mr. Richard Hinks; Mr. F. J. Covne dealt most expertly with the finances and the maddening system of meal tickets, and along with Capt. M. N. Tiffnell issued huge amounts of commodities from the Quartermaster's Stores. Dr. Paul Massey, assisted by Dr. J. L. Blonstein, in conjunction with Mr. W. Shillibeer (physiotherapist), were a medical service team second to none.

Special mention must be made of our four Japanese staff, of whom it is impossible to speak too highly. Mr. S. Yamaguchi organized our cars into the best taxi service in Tokyo, and Miss Nozawa and Mrs. Fukusawa were the most charming, hardworking and efficient of secretaries - with Miss Susan Wallace. Also Mr. Miura, our interpreter, soon became a part of the staff and gave invaluable service. It was a sad moment when we had to say farewell to them.

The thanks of the Association are also given to Mr. R. H. Ellingworth, our Olympic Attaché, whose help for the years before and during the Games was invaluable. During our stay in Japan, we also had the services of Mr. K. Macdonald and Mr. spoke fluent Japanese and assisted us greatly, as indeed did all our "Uncles"

Mention must also be made of the outstanding help given by H. E. Sir Francis Rundall, and the British Embassy in Tokyo. Thanks to the Embassy, a supply of paperback books were made available for the team, and arrangements made for enterthe British community in Tokyo. A reception was given in the Embassy on October 6 to the team, and to British Technical Officials, letters written by Sir Francis to all our

THE COMPETITIONS

Full results of the competitions will be found elsewhere in this Report, and it will be seen that Great Britain's record was a creditable one. The team gained four gold, twelve silver and two bronze medals, totalling 18. In Rome we had won 20 medals but these included only two gold. In 1956 we had won six gold, seven silver and 11 bronze. winning four gold and seven silver and one bronze, put up its finest performance since the Games in Antwerp in 1920. It might be said since the Games in London 1908.

Seven of the 16 sports brought back one or more medals - namely athletics, equestrian, fencing, rowing, swimming, weightlifting and yachting. In addition we placed many in the finals and many competitors put up the best performance of their careers, some running themselves right out at the end of a race. One cannot ask more of a team.

A PLEASURE AND A PRIVILEGE

TWENTY-FOUR years late - they should have been held there in 1940 - the Olympic Games came to Asia for the first time in October, 1964, when Tokyo hosted the XVIIIth Olympiad. It was a privilege to be at this historic occasion; a privilege the Japanese also made a pleasure by the manner in which they discharged their obligation. They set a standard of organisation succeeding hosts will find it difficult to exect.

Between the extremes of the almostmartial pageantry of Tolyo's Opening Ceremony and the poignant serenity of its Closing, with thousands of competitors, who had marched rank after segregated rank at the first, now intermingled in vast friendly disarray in the arena, were the extremes of the Olympic Movement itself. Hayes against the rest OMPETITION to find the fastest Olympian began in appalling conditions of rain and wind with 75 starters in the 100 metres, and 10 heats in the first round. There was what was to prove a somewhat historic start to this traditional opening of the Olympic athletics programme when the first heat was won by the Japanese, Iijima, in 10.3sec - the fastest time of the round. This was to be the only occasion a Japanese finished first in any round of any event in the entire eight days of men's and women's athletics.

Even at this stage, Hayes looked the most powerful, if not the classiest, of the winners. It was a little disappointing that 1960 bronzemedallist Peter Radford, alone of the Britons, qualified for the second round, finishing second to Jackson (USA) in 10.6sec, but the major surprise was the elimination of Antao (Kenya), double sprint champion two years ago in Perth, who could finish only fourth behind Schumann (Germany), Johnson (Jamaica) and Earle (Australia) in 10.7sec.

In most cases 10.6sec or better was needed to qualify for the second round, although Earle got through in 10.7. A similar time was not good enough to get Lynn Davies through for Britain and Meakin's 10.9 left him well out of it. Murad (Venezuela) was probably the luckiest, claiming third place behind Jerome (Canada) and Piquemal (France)

All the second-round winners clocked 10.3sec in the afternoon, when conditions were a little better. Most notable feature was a display of power running by Figuerola (Cuba) who led from start to finish; and the dip finish for a narrow fourth-place verdict over Ozolin (USSR) had an air of desperation. Jerome's characteristic high arm action and short stride soon carried him clear of his rivals but he was strongly challenged by both Kone (Ivory Coast) and Jackson over the last balf. Despite his first-round time, it was clear that Iijima did not have the staying power to hope to remain with the big boys for long, while Radford had the misfortune back into the second 'pack' towards the end and lost a semi-final place to Schumann

After only a third of the first semi-final it was Hayes against the rest. He was the apex of the field and was running exceptionally strongly without any sign of his famous 'roll'. A fitful wind, registering 5.28m per second in his favour, robbed him of a world record after he had clocked 9.9sec in a beautiful run. The second semi-final soon resolved itself into two races, between the leading four and the others, Figuerola and Jerome looked the strongest and the only question remaining was whether either had enough reserves to issue a serious challenge to Hayes. There was some concern about Pender (USA) when he collapsed at the finish clutching his side, but in the event he lined up for the final.

Haves drew the inside lane for the final, with Schumann between him and Figuerola, Kone and Jerome in the middle, then Maniak (Poland), Robinson and Pender in that order Jerome was on the track long before anyone else, anxious to start and get it over with, it seemed. When they got away first time Jerome was possibly leading for a moment. but slowly gave way to the dusky Figuerola and then both were challenged, overhauled, and swept aside by the magnificent Hayes who had the second half of the race to himself leading this trio well ahead of the rest of the field. The only surprise was that he did not clock 9.9 again. Had he been pushed he would probably have done so, but at least the Olympic record was deservedly his, and he equalled the world record with a valid aiding wind of 1.03m per second.

200 metres: Providing an object lesson in long sprinting over four races in two days was the eventual champion. Carr (USA). He worked up to his final victory superbly, did not break 21.0sec until the semi-finals, then calmly lopped 0.4sec off his previous best in the preliminaries and chopped another 0.3sec away in showing clear dominance over the Man who took the eye in the early races was the shaven-headed Drayton (USA), fastest of the first-round winners (20.7). Foik (Poland), Jerome and Roberts (Trinidad) also won well. British hopes of an unexpected finalist received a boost when Menzies Campbell won the third heat in 21.3sec over a still sadly-off-form Antao, and Radford also qualified with a fourth-place 21.5. But by the second round reality asserted itself. Campbell could clock only 21.7 in a heat won in half-a-second faster by Jerome, and Radford was unable to improve and was easily eliminated. Although Carr had begun to show his hand, at this stage most eyes were still on Drayton and Roberts. who looked as if he might provide an upset.

Foik was also a possible medallist with his determined running and long energetic stride, but the manner in which he lost ground over the final 20 metres of the first semifinal virtually ruled him out, while Stebbins also faded towards the end

The same was true of the reigning Olympi champion, Berruti (Italy), who looked medal material so long as he was travelling round the bend. Only Carr was able to pass him in the straight, but Roberts seemed to have plenty in hand in finishing third

In the final, Berruti had the inside lane. with Ottolina (Italy) who had been disappointing in the preliminaries, Jerome and Foik in front of him. The three Americans, phalanx in the middle and Roberts was unfortunate enough to draw the outside. Personally, I feel the Trinidadian may have got a silver with a slightly better draw. Drayton moved up fast in the early stages, but then Carr at last gave us the full benefit of his they hit the straight. He improved his lead slightly over the last stages and took the Olympic record with him through the tape.

400 metres: There were no outstanding surprises in the first round, led by Mottley (Trinidad) in 45.9sec, although Tim Graham just scraped through in fourth place (48,4 sec) in one of the slower heats. None of Britain's entries looked really relaxed enough at this stage, but it was a disappointment to see Adrian Metcalfe beaten in the second round after a sluggish run in which he failed to make up ground in the finishing straight and tailed off to fifth place in 47.8sec behind Skinner (Trinidad), Williams (USA). Bezabih (Ethiopia) and Addy

Cassell (USA) looked the best of the field at this stage, easing up even against Mottley after storming past the field in the first half of his heat. Badenski set his usual hot pace in the second heat, while Crothers (Canada) came through with a strong finish to pip both Graham and Kahn (Jamaica) on the post. The astonishing Kiprugut (Kenya), who had been giving the 800m men some rare frights, led off against Larrabee (USA), Robbie Brightwell and company, but finished on his face in seventh place, while Brightwell showed good pace judgment to have himself handily placed as the field hit the strong head-wind in the home straight.

When the semi-finals had resolved themselves, the outstanding absentee nation from the final was Germany, who could get only Juettner into fifth place in the semi-final won by Brightwell from Mottley and Williams. Graham did exceptionally well to beat off and eliminate Cassell in a tough struggle for fourth place in the other semi-final, in which Crothers also failed

Still, all the times were comparatively slow, despite generally good conditions apart from the home-straight headwind, and one expected an explosion in the final Graham had the inside lane, trailing Badenski, Vassella (Australia) and Skinner. Brightwell could have been better placed than in front of Larrabee in lane six, but at least he had Mottley and Williams outside him. The British captain was away as well as anyone at the start and quickly made up ground, but not as fast as Mottley, who was

It was here that Larrabee started to show on the field and began a long determined haul which lasted until he broke the tape in previously been run in Tokyo but still well outside the marvellous world and Olympic records of Davis and Kauffman in Rome and Plummer's world mark in 1963. Brightwell proved to have nothing left in the clinch ing last 50 metres and although he equalled his best metric time he could make no impression on either Badenski or Mottley. But Graham ran far above himself to clock 46.0 (previous best 46.5 in the semi-final) and was shared the same time.

800 metres: The presence of the holder. Snell (New Zealand), dominated this event from start to finish. The six first-round heats and the two semi-finals were almost irritating eliminations to the final gun which, as everyone guessed, would set off one of the finest two-lap fields ever assembled. Magnificent Snell

Three semi-finals had to produce the final eight runners - the first two and the two fastest losers. Lurot (France) tried to break over when he was ready and pulled both Siebert (USA) and Pennewaert (Belgium into the final with him. Boulter had Kiprugut to make the pace in the second semi-final but although the Briton took over at the bell he was passed by Kerr and the Kenyar on the final bend. The leading two finished easily in 1:46.1, and were the first to break Snell's Rome Olympic record, Boulter seemed to me to follow their lead and run for a place, perhaps forgetting that time was by taking the lead in the third semi-final but after being overhauled by Kinder and Farrell (USA) in the first straight the pace was too dangerous burst round the final bend, but Crothers (Canada) soon had the measure of

The final was all that one expected, with the exception that nobody could push Snell to a world record. The indomitable Kiprugut was soon out in front and seemed the only man in the field not conscious of Snell's presence as he led past the bell in 52.0sec with Pennewaert and Kerr following. Snell kept the major opponents in front of him until he was ready and when he made his break with 200m to go he went straight into for one, was taken by surprise with the swiftness of the move. He had neither the and eventually had to chase on the outside of Kiprugut all round the final bend. Even when the Canadian unleashed his finishing burst, Snell had enough in hand to hold him Kiprugut, after nearly falling when he caught Kerr's heel 50 metres from home, came again to pass the Jamaican who sprawled across the line on his chest. All four deservedly broke the Olympic record. Finally it should be recorded that it is 36 years since the USA place either in the first four, though in Rome,

1,500 metres: With 50 entries and only seven non-starters (the most notable of whom was Jazy of France), there were almost as many candidates to upset Snell in this event as there had been in the 800m. With at least 10 runners in each of four first-round the two fastest losers qualified for the semifinals, there were inevitably surprises and upsets, and not until the finalists had been

Britain's latest sub-four-minute miler, Bill McKim, was our only casualty in the first time, 3min 42.8sec, of the qualifiers while John Whetton ran easily into third place, in 3:44.2, in a heat won by Bernard (France). The semi-finals, from which the first four and the fastest loser qualified, sorted the men out from the boys - and one of those who nearly did not make it was Whetton who had Snell, Baran (Poland), and Bernard to deal with. While these three, together with to go outside the bunch round the final bend and was still accelerating while the leaders

Bernard took the nine-man final field through the first 400m in 58sec, followed by Burleson, Whetton, Baran, Snell, Simpson and Davies, all within a second. Shortly afterwards, coming into the home straight for the second time, Whetton, much to his self in the lead and almost back-pedalled in his embarrassment at such a situation. Everybody was trying to get behind or close Davies took over just before the halfway mark (800m in 2:0.5) and led them through the bell, followed by Snell and Baran, Snell had played cat-and-mouse with the field so far and when he pounced just past the 1,200m mark, which Davies took in 2:59.3 he was perfectly poised for the kill.

He jumped Davies as if he did not exist and was away with that powerful, surging smooth acceleration before the others could move. In no time there was a huge gan bestraight he had time to look calmly over his shoulder. The scramble behind was frenetic. a front runner, took Odlozil - who had stayed well back until the final lap - to a twice getting himself boxed in on the backstraight and looked a silver-medallist with 50m to go. Neither Burleson nor Baran had being pushed out of the way when he tried

5,000 metres: But for Snell winning the 800m final, which followed, the heats of the 5 000m would have made Friday, October 16, perhaps to Britain's failures in the same event on the first day of athletics in Rome in 1960. There were few shocks in these Games greater than seeing their Rome 5.000m champion, Halberg, dismissed from the Tokyo final like an also-ran. Another New Zealand hope, Scott, also failed dismally and only Baillie survived the four torrid

Britain fared little better, placing only Mike Wiggs, who won his heat in 13min 51.0sec, second in time only to Clarke (Australia), who won the fourth in 13:48.4. John Herring joined Kidd (Canada) among the back-markers when Jazy (France) went away as soon as the last lap of his heat started and only Baillie could get near him,

The withdrawal of Gammoudi (who had done so well in the 10,000m a few days before) took some of the anticipation out of the wind with Norpoth leading. Coming round a bend on the second lap, Wiggs, in the an opponent and fall. From then on he 1,000m mark (2:50.2) Clarke went round the field from nearly last to take the lead which he held until just before 4,000m, passing 2,000m in 5:39.4 and 3,000m in 8:22.2 in

Clarke succeeded in stepping up the pace, but only Baidyuk (USSR), apart from Wiggs. was successfully dropped before the final lap in touch, but the big break came from Dellinger (USA) who stormed away with about two laps to go. All the other leaders followed him comfortably, however, and it appeared to be Jazy's race as Clarke and Dellinger gave way in the back straight to the Frenchman. Norpoth looked his strongest opponent as they approached the final bend but suddenly Schul appeared to challenge both. He seemed to take all the fight out of Jazy in a few brief metres in the home straight, for both Norpoth and Dellinger passed the dispirited Frenchman in the last few yards.

10,000 metres: As the field of 38 streamed away from the starter's gun in the last event of a cold, wet first day of athletics, I doubt if any among the watchers had the Americanwinner. Even most of his compatriots, I am sure, considered the recent US champion and record-holder, Lindgren, as their best hope.

Clarke (Australia) tried to break the field in the initial laps, leading at 2,000m (5:29.6) and 4,000m (11:15.0) and at each kilometre from 6,000m (16:57.8) onwards, but his three major rivals stuck with him all the way. Lindgren (USA) was first to challenge, leading at 3,000m (8:20) when Bolotnikov was already out of the running.

Mills then came strongly to the front for the first time but was soon pulled back by (Ethiopia) and all four then left behind persistent pursuers such as Tsuburaya (Japan), Cook (Australia), Lindgren, Ivanov (USSR) and Halberg (New Zealand) and began to lap the field. When none of this second group made any response, it was clear that the race would be decided among these four, and, as I have said, one expected Mills to be the first to be dropped.

But it was Wolde who first began to fade, after Mills had made another burst to the front with about 800m to go. The American was leading as the bell announced the dramatic last lap. As I saw it, Clarke, following hotly round the penultimate turn, was baulked by a lapped runner as he tried to follow Mills, but pushed his way through and in the process sent the American staggering across the track. Gammoudi, following behind, spotted the gap as the two leaders fell apart, and was through it like a flash, handing out more punishment to Mills on the way. In no time, the Tunisian had a 10yd lead down the back straight and was going full-out for home. That was the end of Mills, one again thought. Clarke poised himself for the kill as he closed up on Gammoudi round the last turn and swept up to the dusky red-vested leader with about 60m to go, Gammoudi shot one startled glance over his shoulder and fled. Twice more Clarke surged to overtake but was held, and then suddenly Mills swept by on the outside in an irresistible burst of speed which shattered them both.

Bikila's great double

The British runners were all outside their best, Hill clocking 29:53.0 for 18th place, Bulliyant 30:12 (21st), and Murray 30:22.4 (22nd), but at least they had the satisfaction of finishing in front of Empire six-miles champion Bolotnikov, whose Rome record was beaten by the first four finishers.

Marathon: A staggering victory was gained by the Ethiopian, Bikila Abebe, who became the first to win an Olympic marathon twice in succession, established a world best of 2hr 12min 11.2sec in the process, was out on his own for over half the race. led by over four minutes at the end, and treated the crowd to a display of gymnastic limbering after he had finished. It was a performance to rank with the greatest Olympic achievements of all time.

In a race of this length it would be almost incredulous to say there was only one man in it. But for most of the distance, Bikila was drawing steadily and remorselessly away from his challengers, and when Hogan (Eire) quit after 35km there were nearly three minutes between Abebe and Tsuburaya (Japan), who took over second place.

Shortly after 5km Clarke (Australia) and Hogan began to drop the leading group, including Boubaker (Tunisia), Julian (New Zealand). Hammachi and Hill, and it was at this point that Bikila probably won the race. Turning in a 5km stretch of 14:55, he knocked off the 13sec separating himself from Clarke and Hogan and then followed with further 5km times of 15:21 and 15:23, all three of which were at least 10sec faster than any of his rivals except Clarke were able to produce

Clarke was completely broken by this performance and, although he and Hogan were drawn clear of the field by Abebe until all three were over a minute ahead at 15km. once Clarke began to drop behind he fell like a stone. It took Bikila a lot longer to shake off the dogged Hogan, unsung hero of the race, who held the Ethiopian to a 1min 26sec lead at 35km before finally caving in altogether and retiring.

Heatley and Kilby staved pretty close throughout the race, both overhauling Hill who preceded Clarke's rapid downhill path after staying with the leaders for nearly 10km. Both maintained a fairly even pace. in contact. Together with Edelen (USA) and Vandendriessche (Belgium) they crept steadily through the field, but medals seemed out of the question for any of them when Tsuburava, who had made strong progress between five and 20km suddenly produced a 16:18 "lap" between 35 and 40km which put him 1min 15sec up on the British runners But this, too, was the last effort for the Japanese runner and although he succeeded in holding off Kilby, Heatley shadowed him into the stadium and overhauled him round the final bend in a finish which finally diverted the crowd's attention from the gymnastics display being given by the victorious Bikila.

4 x 100 metres relay: The new Olympic sprint champion, Hayes (USA), produced a run over the last leg of the final which almost time, and certainly did so in quality and excitement. Taking over on the last leg from Stebbins, after some indifferent US batonchanging, Haves was certainly not first, for the French anchor-man. Delecour, was albrought him out of the ruck within the first 30m and Delecour had no answer to his power. But for him there would probably have been no world record for the USA squad; it was only justice for the world best Hayes narrowly missed in the 100m sprint,

The first-round preliminaries were a mere formality - although the British had qualms about a late-selection squad - for with 16 of the 21 teams to qualify only the real minnows were left behind at this stage, Britain, running Radford. Ron Jones, Campbell and Davies throughout, got the judgment on a three-team tie on time with Australia and Nigeria for the last qualifying place in the first semi-final behind USA, France and Jamaica. The same time (40.1) was not good enough to get Germany through in the second semi-final in which

Despite a slow change between Jones and Campbell, Britain were well in the hunt at the last change-over in the final. But Davies was overwhelmed well before the finish and our squad, although improving on the British record, was the only one of the finalists not to tie or beat the previous Olympic record.

4 x 400 metres relay: Again the premainly through the inclusion of Milkha Singh, were the only possible finalists who did not qualify from the three heats, the second of which was almost farcical with only four of the six teams competing.

But the final more than made up for it, with the first three, USA, Britain and Trinidad, all breaking the world record in what was certainly one of the greatest relays if not the greatest relay ever seen. It was a fitting climax to the athletics track programme and Britain particularly ended on the note of determination and team-spirit which had sustained the athletics team all through.

Graham was in the outside lane for the first leg but produced a magnificent run to hand over to Metcalfe just behind Cassell (USA). Perhaps misjudging a little. Metcalfe bravely took the lead from Larrabee (USA) on the back stretch but had to give it back before handing over to Cooper and collapsing on the track-side. Bernard had run Trinidad close up on this stage and when Roberts overtook Cooper a tremendous battle developed between him and Williams (USA) for the lead. The British runner was also passed by Mel Spence (Jamaica) but grittily made up some ground in the straight Brightwell was faced with about two yards to make up for a medal place and was seven vards behind Carr.

He lost a yard or two more on the first half of the lap as Mottley and Kerr turned it into a real sprint by trying to catch Carr. Mottley succeeded along the back-straight, but Carr immediately streamed away again and was well clear by the time he hit the home-straight. In the meantime, Brightwell, running superbly, began his long haul. Although he passed a fading Kerr about 50m from the tape, the task of catching Mottley, still some three yards ahead. seemed impossible, particularly as Kerr's elbow had caught the British runner and sent him staggering wide on to the track It was this blow, however, which Brightwell admitted afterwards "got his dander up" and made him determined to beat the Trinidadian as well; inch by desperate inch he pulled up until with a superhuman effort he got his chest to the line first, while Mottley gazed sideways at him in astonishment, and afterwards fell and rolled over and 110 metres hurdles: Although only Mike Parker survived for Britain to the semifinals, there were no real surprises in the first round. Parker was in the same heat as the favourite, Hayes Jones, who led from the start. Parker and Duriez (France) broke from the following bunch after about 70m and caught Jones on the line. Laurie Taitt was 0.2sec behind third-place John (Germany) in his heat won by another favourite, Lindgren (USA). The only other incident of note came from Christyakov (USSR), who knocked over the last two hurdles but still managed third place in 14.7, easily the slowest qualifying time (and in the semi-finals had the distinction of being disqualified).

The third USA runner, Davenport, who was injured, was eliminated in the first semi-final, while in the second Parker finished last in 14.8 after hitting a midfield hurdle. Predictably, and appropriately, the 26-year-old veteran hurdler Jones beat his team-mate, Lindgren, over the last third of the final to take the gold with Mikhailov (USSR) close behind and pipping fair-haired, bespectacled Ottoz for the bronze medal. It was significant, perhaps, that Italy qualified all three of her runners for the final against two from the USA. who have for so long dominated this event.

400 metres burdles: From the moment he set off to win the first heat of the preliminaries in 50.5sec - fastest of the first round -Britain's John Cooper was in cracking form and hopes of a bronze medal were sustained right up until the last few strides by this gritty runner in the final turned the bronze into a quite unexpected silver. But in the first round, also, was a notable performance by Peter Warden, who won a tense struggle for third place (51.6), pulling away up the

Mike Hogan did not have enough to qualify in a heat which was notable for a keen battle between Morale (Italy) and Anisimov (USSR) which revealed that the Italian European champion was hurdling as

Despite another fine run (51.2), Warden was outclassed in the first semi-final which went easily to Cawley (49.8), who caught Knoke, the early leader, coming out of the second bend and had plenty in hand over the fast-finishing Frinolli (Italy). Drawn in lane seven, Cooper had no alternative but to go flat-out all the way and shared the lead with Luck from the last bend onwards. Sensation was the defeat of Hardin into sixth place.

Draw for the final was Anisimov, Knoke (Australia), Luck, Cooper, Geeroms (Belgium), Cawley, Frinolli and Morale, With excellently placed and kept up with them all the way, except Frinolli, who went off at a terrific speed only to fade in the homestraight. With 50m to go it was clear that nobody was going to catch Cawley, but Cooper, Morale, Knoke and Luck all seemed to take the last hurdle together and sheer determination saw the Britisher through to claim the silver medal.

3,000 metres steeplechase: The first three of each of three heats and the fastest loser the preliminaries were that the Americans seemed determined to take the event by the scruff of the neck. In the first heat Zwolak led for most of the way. He was dropped by Oliveira (Portugal) and Belyayev (USSR) over the last half of the last lap and gallantly lost a run-in for third place. Young was also often in the lead in a much faster second heat lead with half-a-lap to go and went on to break the Olympic record in 8 min 33 sec - a run-in nicely timed to avoid the terrific struggle that went on behind after which Texereau (France) only qualified as the fastest loser. Ernie Pomfret (GB) gallantly and Alekseyunus (USSR) go, but made sure

Although he possibly misjudged the lead which Roelants established and was a little disappointed that he could not get closer to him, Herriott ran a very sensible final to claim the silver medal. Roelants produced the race to drop persistent shadowers like Alekseyunas, Texereau and Young. At the bell he was over 25 yds ahead and although way down the back straight, there was never much hope that he would catch the leader, who hurdled beautifully throughout. Only Belyayev made any impression on the Briton in the run-in.

High jump: Twenty of the 28 starters cleared the qualifying height of 6ft 9kin (2.06m) after 2hr 10min of miserable competition on Britain's Gordon Miller, who had three attempts at 6-6\(\frac{1}{2}\) (2.0m), two at 6-7\(\frac{1}{2}\) (2.03) and only got over the qualifying height at his the way included such notables as Sneazwell (Australia), who failed once each at 6-43 (1.95) and 6-91, Pettersson (Sweden) who once at 6-63 and Brumel (USSR) who made 6-74 at the last attempt.

Beginning at what seemed a ridiculously low height of 6-23 (1.90), the final, not altogether surprisingly, took five hours, all largely windless conditions. Under this lengthy handicap it was also not surprising that no world record emerged, that only the first two broke the Olympic record, and that the gold medal was finally decided on fewer the six who attempted it, and Miller was the third to go, at 6-7%, some 2in (5cm) below his previous best. Most of the jumpers, including Brumel, Thomas, Pettersson and Rambo (USA), came in at 6-63 but the holder, Shavlakadze (USSR), was the last to Sneazwell, who had earlier failed once at 6-43, needed three attempts at this height and was shortly the first of the "big men" to fail. Five were left when the bar reached 7ft (2.14), for which Brumel, Thomas and Shavlakadze all needed three jumps, and the Olympic champion and Pettersson departed at 7-1 (2.16). It was at this point that Thomas had a first-jump failure which was to prove decisive, for both he and Brumel cleared 7-12 (2.18), leaving Rambo behind, but then failed at 7-24 (2.20).

Long jump: Lynn Davies, of Wales, gave Britain her first and most surprising athletics field-events gold medal since 1908 by outjumping two former world record-holders. Ter-Ovanesyan (USSR) and Boston (USA), and in the process became only the second non-American to win the event since 1896.

The preliminaries, and the final, lasting four hours in all, were held in atrocious conditions of rain and variable gusty wind. Of the 42 jumps made in the final, only two had the wind behind them. It is as much a tribute to Davies' determination and patience ning leap was saved until the wind temporarily

Only five of the 32 starters reached the qualifying distance of 24ft 11in (7.60m) and the next best seven were chosen to make up the necessary final 12. John Morbey was among the lucky ones, having reached 24-93 (7.56) after two no-jumps, but the third Briton, Fred Alsop, with 23-93 (7.26) and two no-jumps, was eliminated. Davies, who had followed his first leap of 24-24 (7,39) with a no-jump, would have been out, too, but for his 25-64 (7.78) at his last attempt.

Boston, Davies and Ter-Ovanesyan followed each other in that order in the final jumps. At the end of the first round, the Russian led the American title-holder by only a quarter-of-an-inch at 25-61 and Davies (24-51) was fourth behind West (Nigeria), 24-101. The Briton had a no-jump next, when Boston moved up to 25-94 and into the lead, third with a leap of 24-103. So the stage was set for the final three jumps, and immediately all the leaders improved without changing position; Boston to 25-10½ (7.88), Ter-Ovanesyan to 25-7½ (7.80) and Davies to 25-6½ (7.78).

Nobody was happy in the wind and rain, and Davies and Boston, in particular, were taking a long time over their jumps. When the Briton launched himself again at the board, a cheer from supporters near the pit brought early news that it was a good jump. Davies skipped out of the pit and waited impatiently for the measuring. It showed an improvement of nearly a foot to a British record of 26-51 (8.07) and suddenly the pressure was on Boston with only one jump to go. Ter-Ovanesyan's sloppy landing on his penultimate try possibly robbed him of a gold, but he, too, pushed the American down a place, leaping 26-21 (7.99). Then all eyes were on Boston. He made it a big one, but not quite big enough and the gold medal went to Davies by 11 in.

Pole vault: Using two pits alongside each other, each with the deepest bedding I have ever seen any vaulter literally disappear into. the 29 aspirants launched themselves at a qualifying height only 44in (10cm) below the Olympic record set by Bragg (USA) in winning the title in Rome. Never was the progress pole more amply shown. And it took over 12 hours of it before Hansen gave the USA victory in this event for the 15th successive time with his last jump after fighting off the challenge of three Germans in a truly titanic

David Stevenson, our solitary vaulter, cleared all his attempted heights first time in the qualifications until he reached the vital Perhaps he made a mistake in preferring to go straight from 14-91 (4.50) to the qualifying height. Among the favourites, Reinhardt (Germany) and Nikula (Finland) both took only two jumps, at 14-5‡ (4.40) and 15-1‡, clearing each first time, and Hansen, Bliznyetsov (USSR) and Pennel (USA) did not jump until the final height, Pennel only clearing at the second attempt. Another favoured German, Preussger, nearly upset the form when

The final 19 began what was to be a in a 2.60m wind and ended it eight hours and 55 minutes later on a cloudy, windless, misty night watched still by several thousand people who let out a great roar at each successful jump and hardly less vociferous groans at the failures. Competition started 13-91 (4.20). With the bar at 15-5 (4.70) everybody had jumped, and Reinhardt, Nikula and Preussger had each had two failures, the last-named again knocking off the bar twice at his first attempted height 15-11 (4.60).

Hansen and Pennel were the last to come in at 15-5, but two stages later, with the bar above 16ft for the first time, the USA reduced only to Hansen. Including his liminary round, Pennel, in fact, made of seven vaults, failing at 15-101 (4.85). indeed, Hansen won a gold medal with one jump more. He had first-time clearar at all his attempted heights before his battle with Reinhardt at 16-83 (5,10), w the German in contrast had hit the bar in initial leaps at all of his first four heig However, by the time Hansen was left a against the three Germans at 16-61 (5 they were all in their stride, and Lehn had attempted and cleared first time all exone of the eight stages between 14-54

Hansen passed up 16-63 and was then locked in battle with Reinhardt, who fol-Continued on page 28

Alsop led off the 21-hour final with another record of 54-0 (16.46) to again take the lead against Schmidt, 53-84 (16 37) chance to leap ahead at 54-71 (16.65). Alsop was still second until Kraychenko Alsop failed to improve at the vital stage and his two fouls at the start of the finals among the leading six were disastrous to place with a penultimate leap of 54-43 (16.58), but Schmidt quashed all challenges with his final effort, which also broke his

Shot: Long (USA) was the only one of the 13 qualifiers from 22 starters to get over 62ft 4 in (19.00m), and - like his nearest challengers Matson (USA), 62-03 (18.92) Lipsnis (USSR) and O'Brien (USA), 58-64 (17.84) - made it with his first put. Neither 55-01 (16.77), 54-94 (16.70) and 56-61 (17.23), and Lucking had a disastrous time. beginning with two no-throws before reaching 57-114 (17.67),

Long took the lead at 64-4 (19,61) with was the only man to join him over 19m, with 63-1 (19.23). Matson came into the reckoning with a second-round effort of 62-114 (19.19), and he took the lead in the third round when he reached 65-24 (19.88). when O'Brien, striving for his fourth medal at 62-113 (19.20). However, as soon as the last six began their final three puts, puts of over 20m (65-7), which eventually gave them first and second places respecno-throw, Matson on his penultimate try and Long on his last.

Discus: The remarkable Oerter (USA) set a new Olympic record of 198ft 74in (60.54m) with his first throw, which was sufficient to lead the qualifiers, and then went on to claim his third successive gold medal with another Olympic record on his last toss of the discus, which reached 200-14 (61.00). It was, in fact only his fifth throw home that he did not need to make the sixth World record-holder Danek (Czechoslovakia) was the only other thrower to get over 60m (196-10) and also twice broke the old Olympic record.

The 28 starters had good weather but only 12 of them reached the 180-54 (55.00m) needed to qualify, among them Britain's Roy Hollingsworth who had throws of 172-61 (52.60), 170-101 (52.08) and 183-7 (55.96). He could not continue improving in the final, but after a first effort of 176-31 (53.74), his 176-81 (53.87) was good enough for 10th place. Danek's first throw in the final of 195-114 (59.73) took him into the lead and there he stayed for four rounds. Oerter, languishing around the mid-50m mark, was overhauled by his team-mates. Weill and Silvester. It seemed as if Ocrter would be deprived of his third gold as he

Hammer: Competition was furious from the start, with the 1956 Olympic champion and world record-holder, Connolly (USA). throwing 221ft 14in (67.40m), and Zsivotzky the Olympic record, and the eventual winner Klim (USSR), 220-14 (67.10), tying the qualifying round. Twelve others among the 24 starters reached the 206-84 (63.00) beyond Britain's Howard Payne, who had

Zsivotzky's new Olympic record lasted spectively. By the third round, Zsivotzky was still in the lead but then Klim appeared on the scene and in four successive throws broke

Javelin: An extraordinary competition athletics abysmal affected the preliminary the 77m (252-74in) qualifying distance. The ditions wrought havoc among the rest, and when the final 12 had been made up we were without such notables as Macquet record-holder himself, Pedersen (Norway). Among those who got through with performances far below their usual best were Sidlo (Poland), Lusis (USSR) and Kinnunen (Finland)

Although the weather improved slightly towards the end of the final, one was always looking for and expecting the unexpected and so it proved. Sidlo was first in the lead at 263-0 (80,17), but then had three foul throws. By that time he had been overtaken by Lusis, 264-2 (80.57), in the second round, but in the fourth Nevala suddenly launched a spear that travelled over 13ft (4m) further than he had done previously in the competition and landed in first place. It was even good enough to allow him two foul throws on his last efforts and still claim the 20km walk: Britain's Ken Matthews was in the lead when he collapsed at the roadside in this event in Rome four years ago. This time he finished the job, walking into the stadium over a minute-and-a-half in front of his nearest rival after having led again

Zinn (USA) was something of a surprise leader of the 30 starters (26 finished) over the early stages, at a fast pace, and Matthews only seemed to be worried so long as he was being led. Once he got to the front, he dropped easily into his usual fluid style and drew steadily away over succeeding laps of the 1.75km circuit which formed the main part of the race. The course was flat after a short uphill stretch coming out of the Matthews went through 5km in 22min 19sec to lead Zinn by one second, Lindner (Germany) by 3sec, and Golubnichiy, winner in 1960, by 4sec. By the half-way while Zinn was already dropping back 53sec and Golubnichiy by 1min 20sec.

Bilek (Czechoslovakia), Reimann (Gerthose who paid the penalty for trying to maintain the early pace, while Freeman (Australia) walked very steadily to claim fourth place just in front of Solodov, who moved up exceptionally fast in the latter stages, bravely tailed by the two other Britishers, John Edgington (eighth) and John Paddick (10th), the former being involved in an on-the-track battle with Zinn and Krolovich, the third Russian, with only three secs between the three of them at the finish. Both Matthews and Lindner beat the previous Olympic best.

50km walk: The loping stride of Pamich (Italy) carried him to the first new world best he clocked 4hr 11min 12.4sec after being given a terrific fight over the last half of the course by Britain's Paul Nihill, whose The first 12 to finish, including the holder, Don Thompson, beat the previous Olympic was 19.2sec outside it in 13th place

It was an adventurous walk for Pamich, Round about the 38km mark, when he and Nihill were neck-and-neck in front, the trouble. If Nihill had thoughts that he had forced his rival's retirement, they were soon dispelled. At 40km, the Britain was four seconds down, and very slowly slipped further back over the last stages. Still it was exciting to see him come plugging white-capped into the arena after a gallant finish 12th. His lead was greatest (41sec) just before he "blew up", but there was another dramatic change hereabouts when Hoehne (Germany), who had been in third place until Nihill overhauled him at 15km, suddenly passed the Britisher again and opened a small gap. At this stage, Nihill was 19sec behind Pamich, but within another 5km he had caught up with Hoehne and both were on the heels of Pamich. After this, Hochne too was dropped and the two leaders then fought it out to the finish. Pettersson (Sweden) and Leuschke (Germany) had a torrid battle for third place, with the German just ahead until the last 5km. Both Thompson and Middleton walked steadily throughout, always well up in a field of 34 of whom only two were disqualified.

Decathion After six successive Olympic victories the USA was not expected to provide a man to retain the title, which seemed a certainty for the heir-apparent, Rome silver-medallist and world recordholder C. K. Yang of Formosa. That he finished fifth was more surprising than that the event was won by the balding 24-yearold. German physical education student, Willi Holdorf, who ran himself to complete exhaustion in the last of the 10 events, the 1,50m, to make sure of the gold medal which had been within his grasp from the morning of the previous day, when he opened proceedings with a 10.7sec 100m which took him immediately into the lead.

Two Russians, Aun and Storozhenko, headed the long-jump, and another German, Walde, eventual bronze-medallist, led in the high-jump, but Holdorf finished the first day's events as he had begun it with a win in the 400m and his total of 4,000pts gave him a 16-point lead over Walde, with the third German, Beyer, in fourth place, be-

Although his best events – pole-vault, high hurdles and javelin, all of which he eventually won – were yet to come, Yang seemed out of the running for a medal even at this stage. He had been below his best in most of the first day's events and was in nith place –287 points behind the leader. He pulled up to fifth, but could only close the points gap by 50.

Trailing Walde in second place by Grps and Holdorf by 127, as all three clashed in the 1,500m, Aun made a terrific effort to the 1,500m, Aun made a terrific effort to 100 pts, advantage and a silver medal, but 11m, 200 first place with 45pts to spare. Tyus another Rudolph

HE first heat of the second round of the 100 metres was sufficient to convince the discernible that Britain's gold-medal hope, Dorothy Hyman, was, barring accidents, again to be outdone by an American sprinter, as in Rome writes Doug Gardner, Miss Hyman, slowest of the firstround heat winners in 11.6sec, clashed with Wyomia Tyus, fastest in 11.3, and was a very obvious second-best Tyus, another tall, slim, smoothstriding American in the Rudolph mould, flashed to an 11.2 to tie the world record and set a new Olympic record with Hyman making no impression upon her. Madeleine Cobb had departed in the first round, but Daphne Arden did her second 11.5 to finish second to the immensely strong Klobukowska (Poland) for a place in the semi-finals.

But by the time the final eight got down to their marks on the following day, there was only Hyman left of the British trio. She had again met Tyus in the semi-finals, Klobukowska and White (USA) but not finishing full out. McGuire (USA) also seemed to have plenty in hand, and at this stage it looked probable that the Americans

They were drawn together on the three outside lanes of the final; the line-up being Cobian (Cuba). Black (Australia). Tyus, McGuire and White. But after one false star there was only Tyus to watch in the lead Hyman was with the pack for the first half of the race, but was left behind in the frantic finish in which Klobukowska's powerful striding got her a bronze in a photo-finish 200 metres: Only real surprise of the first trigger start again let her down. Britain's three got through to the semi-finals, and notable even at this stage was the form of young Janet Simpson, who won her heat in 24.0sec and improved to 23.7 in the semibehind Simpson, but Dorothy Hyman, although clocking 23.9, was beaten out.

Draw for the final was Morris (Jamaica). Simpson, Samotesova (USSR), Arden and Black (Australia). Black seemed to be was not seriously challenged. But her 23.0 be a threat in future years - and Black to accompany her below Rudolph's Olympic Simpson got a good start and may have been in third place at the start of the straight, but she did not have the finish to go with it.

400 metres: All three Britons got through to the semi-finals, but Pat Kippax and Joy Grieveson then failed, so we were left with Ann Packer to take on a very strong final field. She had beaten Cuthbert (Australia) comfortably in the first semi-final, but the Australian had finished so easily that she had time to look round and make sure that nobody was going to catch her. Amoore one to get close to her after a very bad start. Kippax put in a good sprint in an attempt to get a final place but van der Zwaard

The finalists had a very long wait after coming out until they were able to get to their marks. Order was van der Zwaard, Cuthbert, Amoore, Munkacsi (Hungary), Afterwards, it was clear that Cuthbert won the race virtually at the start. She was away like a bomb, and although Packer and Itkina moved up fast down the back-straight with a 2.50m wind at their backs the Australian was reserving her strength for the homestraight battle. Packer seemed to me to be fractionally in front at the start of the last bend, but she was a yard down coming out of it and just could not make up the deficit. although she gained just a little as they hit the straight (and the wind). Cuthbert's tremendous competitive toughness pulled her through to become a worthy first Olympic

800 metres: An event which ended unexpectedly happily for Britain with the world-record win of Ann Packer, began most disappointingly with the absence of the unofficial world-record holder Sin Kim Dan, taken home, along with the rest of the North Korean team, on the eve of the Games, and also that of the official record-holder. Willis (Australia), who was forced to withshe had overcome so staunchly only a week or two previously in order to gain selection

Miss Willis - who had run herself out in from the finishing line - was just not fit enough to get to the start of the preliminaries but in a time slower than that which got Kazi (Hungary) through as the fastest loser and Anne Smith, both won their heats, but the former was eliminated in the first semifourth-place verdict over Mukhanova (Russia) after being passed by Gleichfeld

rear of the field coming out of the last bend in her semi-final and all four qualifier finished comfortably, although at this stage it looked very much as if the final was to

Although Packer eventually won, Dupureur ran the final superbly, and deserves the title of the most gallant loser of the Games. She led the field through the bell in 58,6sec and staved ahead until Packer overhauled her with about 30 metres to go Packer had begun slowly and did not seem to be happy until Chamberlain, in the lane behind, had caught up with her. Szabo (Hungary) was the early leader, but the field stayed bunched, with Smith at the rear, until the final bend. By this time, Smith had almost lost contact and Packer appeared to be boxed in alongside Chamberlain and behind wide to go round all of them and caught challenge the British girl's final powerful burst, but had somebody done so it would probably have meant an even better world

80 metres hurdles: One of the closest and most exciting finals of the Games was won in a photo-finish by Balzer (Germany) from Ciepla (Poland) and Kilborn (Australia), all in 10.5sec (an assisting wind of 2.23m spoiling world-record performances), with Irina Press (USSR) and Japan's chief Olympic medal hope, Yoda, only a fraction behind. Mary Rand did not compete, and British champion Pat Pryce progressed only to the semi-finals, where she was perhaps a judges although sharing the same time as Olympic record. Miss Pryce's 10.7sec would have got her into the final had she been in the first heat, which Kilborn won much more

Yoda took it upon herself to sweep her own lane up to the first hurdle for the final and was leading over the first three obher and, much to the disappointment of the crowd, she lacked the finish to stay on terms. Press, Balzer and Kilborn all overhauled Yoda about the midway stage but then Press began to drop back and Ciepla came last hurdle together but Kilborn lost ground on the run-in while Ciepla forged through to produce what must have been a hair-line

4 × 100m relay: There were only two though it tied that of the USSR and was only 0.1sec slower than the USA's winning time in the second heat. The order after much deliberation and practice had been decided as Janet Simpson, Mary Rand, Daphne Arden and Dorothy Hyman. As the

Britain drew the second lane, and my hopes for them went down after a not very good change-over between Simpson and an exceptionally good second leg to make up ground on the leaders, and the change be-

Rand's great jumping

Poland had held the lead from the start and although the USA closed up following a great second leg by Tyus there was never much doubt about the finishing order, particularly with Klobukowska running the last leg for Poland.

Hyman's last run proved how much she had suffered through lack of time to recover from her mid-summer injury. It was easily the best she made throughout the Olympics and some of the old fire and determination really produced results as she drew well clear of Popova (USSR) and even closed up on McGuire over the latter part of the stage. It was staggering to find the British girls among those who had shattered the world record by 0.3sec and more. They had always looked good before - but never that good.

High jump: As expected, Balas (Rumania) failed to make the qualifying height of 5ft 7in (1.70m). Four of these were allowed into the final after clearing only 5-61 (1.68). They did not include Britain's Gwenda Matthews and Linda Knowles - the latter a European bronze-medallist only two years ago at 5-81

Yelena Gorchakova broke world record in javelin preliminaries but could only win a bronze medal for Russia in final 5-5 (1.65). Miss Matthews did better than this, but found 5-61 too much for her.

Frances Slaap reached the qualifying height without any trouble and in the final went over the bar first time at all heights until 5-81 (1.74) and was good enough only for sixth place. Six others also failed at this height, leaving only Balas, Brown (Australia). Chenchik (USSR) and dos Santos (Brazil) Australian and the Russian were the only challengers to Balas and both put up a good fight before the tall Rumanian world and the first target and then jauntily indicated that she would attack the world mark. But after 3hr 20min of a final in which she had done the minimum of jumping, she just failed to clear her target of 6-34 (1.92).

Long jump: Britain waited for 36 years for one of her women athletes to produce her it was won in the grand manner. Mary Rand led from the start, broke the Rome Olympic record in each of her seven jumps and ended she looked like being overhauled.

Thirty-one competitors began the qualification round on a rainy first morning of the athletics programme. Of these, 17 reached the British girls, Sheila Parkin, 19-93 (6.04), Alix record of 20-102 (6.37), which was also tied by both Becker (Germany) and Viscopoleanu

(Rumania). The rain had stopped, but the weather was still cloudy and dull with a variable wind when the two-hour final got under way, Despite the presence of the world recordable to get really close to Mrs Rand until the Polish girl Kirszenstein unleashed 21-61-(6.56) with her third leap to land only 14in (3cm) behind her. Mrs Rand immediately leapt further to 21-9 (6.63) and when Kirszenstein replied with 21-72 (6.60) she again launched herself perfectly from the board for a world-record 22-2 (6.76). Both Kirszensomething of an anti-climax by registering

Shot: The 49ft 24in (15.00m) qualifying but among the eliminated was Britain's lone entry, Mary Peters, who could reach only 47-51 (14.46) with her third and best try. Only two of those who qualified needed more than one put, and the whole thing was over in 35 minutes.

As in the European championships, the hour-long final was a battle for Germany's Culmberger to split the giant Russians Tamara Press and Zybina. Of the others, only Young (New Zealand) got over 55-91 (17.00m). Press was not to be denied her second successive Olympic gold in this event and led all the way through after a first put of 57-54 (17.51), a second of 58-14 (17.72). and a last of 59-6 (18.14) which carried her clear. Culmberger's 57-12 (17.41) held her in second place until Zybina (who won this event as long ago as 1952) unleashed a 57-3 man girl immediately lifted her performance for the silver, with all three breaking the Olympic record.

Discus: One of the most fearsome sights I ever wish to see was world record-holder ing badly in the middle of this final. One almost felt the ground shudder as she stormed out of the "cage" brushing aside all attempts to console her. She was furious. But next time up, her fifth throw, she broke the Olympic record of her compatriot, Nina Ponomaryeva (who finished 11th), and stole the gold from under the hands of Germany's Lotz who had led throughout: an interesting contrast to the sorrowful way another great Russian world record-holder, Ozolina, accepted defeat in the javelin.

There were no British entries among the 21 starters, 14 of whom reached the 164ft 04in (50.00m) qualifying distance, led by Angelova (Bulgaria) 180-3 (54.94), closely followed by Lotz. Press did 164-114 (50.28) with her first throw and was satisfied, but Ponomaryeva needed three attempts before scraping through with 164-74 (50.18).

Press began the final badly with a nothrow while Lotz took the lead with 187-8 183-41 (55.90). Although Lotz then had a no-throw and Manoliu two in succession, only Angelova's 186-0 (56.70) had come between them by the fourth round. Press had thrown 181-8 (55.38) 165-11 (50.58) and 181-2 (55.23), but once she got her big one in at 187-101 (57,27) there was no one to touch

Javelin: There seemed to be nothing peculiar about the weather to produce a world record among a crop of sub-standard performances in the preliminaries. But while USSR's Gorchakova reached 204ft 81/2in (62.04m) on her first throw, at the end only six of the other 15 starters had managed to surpass the qualifying distance of 167-31 (51.00) and anyone over 160-61 (49.84) got through. The lucky five "extras" included Britain's Susan Platt, who followed a no-throw with 163-74 (49.88) and 159-10 (48.72).

Ozolina (USSR), having seen her world record demolished, at least beat her own previous Olympic record with 184-114 (56.38). but there was little indication of the tragedy ahead for her. At the end of the first round in the final she was lying third with 179-43 (54.68) maintained her position by improving to 179-94 (54.81) with her second attempt and then produced four successive no-throws. obviously becoming more and more depressed

Penes (Rumania) won the gold with her first throw, Rudasne (Hungary) the silver with her second, and Gorchakova the bronze with her fourth. Susan Platt could not improve on her first effort of 159-5 (48.59) and finished ninth with a distance well below her

ATHLETICS Women

Pentathlon: Although she won three events to the Russian's two, Mary Rand finished second to Irina Press by 211 pts. But Press was pushed to a world record of 5,246pts and Mrs Rand's great effort saw her become only the second woman ever to pass the 5,000 mark in this event

As usual it was her shot-putting which let Mrs Rand down. She was only 0.2sec behind Press in the hurdles, losing a mere 35pts, but could reach only 36ft 3in (11.05m) in the shot to the Russian's 56-3\(\frac{1}{2}\) (17.16). Although Mrs Rand then won the high jump with a leap of 5-74 (1.72) - better than any of our competitors in the Olympic high jump proper she ended the first day in fourth place, 328pts behind the leader.

Meanwhile, our second competitor, Mary Peters, had shaken the other leading Russian, Bystrova, with three courageous perfor-mances: 11.0sec in the hurdles, 47-6 (14.48) for second place in the shot, and 5-3 (1.60) in the high jump, and was trailing her for second place by only one point. Leading positions at the end of the first day were: Press 3,245pts; Bystrova 3,005; Peters 3,004; Rand 2,917; Stamejcic (Yugoslavia) 2,845.

On the second day, Mrs Rand forged into the silver-medal place with a long jump of 21-53 (6.55) and a 200m run of 24.2sec for a total of 5,035pts. Losing 117pts to Bystrova in the long jump, in which she cleared 18-44 (5.60), cost Miss Peters the chance of a bronze, but a gallant 25.4sec 200m was sufficient to hold off the challenge of the fastfinishing Stamejcic for fourth place.

USA still undefeated

THE UNITED STATES maintained her incomparable record of never having lost a game in Olympic basketball by taking the gold medals again in Tokyo. But the indications before the tournament began in the National Gymnasium Annexe that the Americans might have a tougher fight on their hands than in previous years proved accurate.

As expected, the Russians - with five of their 1960 silver-medal squad again on call faced USA (average height 6ft 42in or 1.95m) in the final and stilled the capacity 5,000 crowd by taking a 16-13 lead midway through the first half. But the Americans, Texas, finally broke through the solid Russian defence to give the reigning chamteam's experienced coach. Hank Iba, sounded a warning note afterwards when he admitted. so well from outside. The competition is going to get tougher all round for us in the future. Basketball is coming along very fast

On their way to the final the Americans never looked in danger of defeat, but the Russians had several uncomfortable moments. A determined Italian team, for instance, threw away the chance of victory the last five minutes to lose 76-67. At this stage of the tournament Italy were lying second in their qualifying group and in with a chance of a bronze medal but a fast and supremely fit Japan sensationally beat them 72-68, and Puerto Rico, who had previously lost to Italy, thus gained second for the bronze medals.

Brazil won the third-place match, repeating their Rome position, by taking charge of the game late in the first half. The USA-trained Puerto Ricans "did much better than we anticipated," in the words of their coach, and much of the credit went to high-scoring Teofilo Ruz Downs, who confident enough to finish their match with Uruguay with only four men on court, could perhaps have been expected to do better. Their margin of defeat in the semi-final against USSR - six points - just about represented the relative merits of the two

The Puerto Ricans, who placed 13th in Rome, were perhaps the most improved (11th) both broke new ground. The anomaly among all the results was the victory of Peru over Brazil in a qualifying-round game by 58-50. The Peruvians - with brothers Enrique, Ricardo, Luis and Raul Duarte in their team - lost four of their eight games by margins of 10pts or less and held the eventual champions to a 60-45 margin, but the system used in Tokyo eventually relegated them to a play-off for 15th place. Another commendable performance was that of Australia, who had successfully battled their way through a rigorous eliminating tournament in Yokohama, along with Mexico, Canada and South Korea, a few days before the competition proper in Tokyo, and eventually

Happily there was little rough play to report. In the final, which could have been expected to produce the fireworks of the tournament, both teams conducted themselves with remarkable restraint, and about the only game to cause any concern in the earlier rounds was that between Italy and Puerto Rico, in which two Italians were slightly injured and four players were fouled beat Japan for ninth place.

Dissent in and out of the ring

N 12 turbulent days in the Korakuen Ice Palace, set amid a silenced fairground, 269 pugilistic hopefuls were finally whittled down to seven Russians, four Poles, two Italians, two Germans, and one each from Korea, France, Japan, USA and the Philippines . . . but not without some bother

Olympic boxing events always seem to have more than their share of rows, rifts and in Tokyo, where aggravated boxers protested against what they considered official in-

Two boxers received suspension (one for life) for an assault, and an attempted assault, on referees, while a third was sidelined for taking 51 minutes to leave the ring after disqualification. But while it is impossible to condone these irresponsible actions, in some degree they were understandable.

Before the boxing began, the IABA in-structed all officials to tighten up on the interpretation of fouls, with the admirable intention of preventing unnecessary injury. acted, in my opinion, over-zealously. Bouts were spoiled not only for the boxer, but for the observer, too, by irritating interruptions and lengthy lectures that could not be interpreted either inside the ring or out.

Other diversions from actual combat included the usual crop of debatable decisions, and protests by boxers and doctors that the gloves provided were unsuitable. Yet only once did I hear the usually inscrutable and unusually placid crowd bellow in real Oriental disgust. That was when USSR's featherweight, Stanislav Stepashkin, was awarded the verdict in his final with the fiery Anthony Villaneuva (Philippines). It was a prime example of the Eastern preference for flailing-fisted courage against pneumatic punching skill.

As far as discontent with the gloves was concerned, boxers complained that the rough surface of the leather was inflexible and made it difficult to form a proper fist. Hence, they said, the numerous warnings handed out for "slapping". Then Britain's Dr. Joseph Blonstein, head of the medical jury, proffered an opinion that the exceptionally large number of cuts - 25 during the first week of competition - could, in some instances, be attributed to the texture of the

The overall impression gathered after watching a succession of hard fights was that USSR and Poland are still the masters of the more volatile Latins and the docile Western Europeans. Asia - with Japan producing her first Olympic champion proved, as expected, to be a substantial threat in the lower weights; while Africa, having assimilated the lessons of Rome, will need another four years to graduate as a real danger.

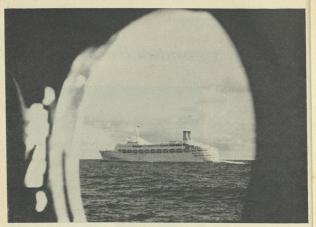

Coaches Hogan "Kid" Bassey, of Nigeria, and Roy Ankrah, of Ghana, have instilled of raw material available. In Mexico I predict Africa will move up among the silver and golds. Cambodia, Korea, the Philippines and Thailand provided fleet-fisted

product of the Soviet Union's stereotyped

While the Russians swamped the finals with their red-vested majority, the real Olympic victor was surely Poland. Three of her four finalists gained gold medals, and all three, from lightweight to welter, came in succession for a remarkable fistic hat-trick over Russian opposition.

Italy's two successes, at flyweight and light-heavyweight, were a refreshing boost for the West, compensating for Britain's total annihilation in elimination rounds and Germany's two defeats on finals night. But perhaps the biggest disappointment was the non-appearance of the 21-stone American negro. Buster Mathis, who broke his hand on the head of his spar-mate, Joe Frazier, in training. The lucky Mr. Frazier took over, but without making too much of an impression after a short-cut route to the final.

This, perhaps, was our biggest Olympic boxing shock. We stunned them in a specially hired Japanese gym during training and confidence positively exuded from eight beaming countenances . . . until the bell clanged. Packer set the pattern on the opening day and before the week was out so was Britain - bar Varley, who plodded on to the third round. McTaggart seemed unlucky, but the rest needed more than fortune. As in Rome our men boxed on the retreat but this time with even less success.

Flyweight (28 entries): won by Fernando Atzori (Italy), on points over Artur Olech (Poland) by 59-58, 60-59, 59-60, 59-59, 60-58. Referee: K. Kokubo (Japan).

It was sobs of joy as the Sardinian house-painter got his majority verdict over Olech, a sawn-off, wrong-way-round Laszlo Papp. Atzori emerged as the stronger puncher of the two (even though he had a black eye from previous engagements). The third round was the most decisive, with the Pole wobbled by some fearsome nose-reddening right crosses. USSR might have had a goldmedallist in this division had not the favourite, Sorokin, been forced to concede his semi-final to Olech because of a slow-healing cut. Sorokin had earlier disposed of Britain's brightest hope, John McCluskey.

Bantamweight (32 entries): won by Takao Sakurai (Japan) against Shin Cho Chung (S Korea), the referee (J. Neuding, Poland) stopping the bout after 1min 18sec of the second round

After his first-series dismissal of Britain's defeat, it was obvious that student Sakurai was going to be the bantamweight to watch. This was confirmed when he knocked out Ghana's Ayree in his next bout. Chung, also a student, and a fellow southpaw, was soon in trouble, taking a count after 30 seconds. Before the end of the first round he had been knocked half-way through the ropes, and this unceremonious procedure was repeated in the second. The bout was rightly stopped. in the air

The "final" most had anticipated took place in the first series when holder Grigoryev, of Russia, met Hungary's Rome fly-weight champion, Toerok. But, when he was ahead, Toerok sustained the most severe eve injury of the tournament, so Grigoryev progressed, only to be later sur-prisingly defeated by Mexico's Fabila.

Featherweight (32 entries): won by Stanislav Stepashkin (USSR) on points over Anthony Villaneuva (Philippines) by 60–58, 58–59, 59-59, 60-59, 60-58, Referee: R. H. Gittins

Again both were southpaws, but Villaneuva started with the disadvantage of having a patched-up eye and forehead injuries. These were soon opened up again as the 24-yearold blond Russian beat a vicious tattoo with his right, but Villaneuva carried the he might have been able to land it more effectively. In the middle of a third-round vice. Villaneuva was allowed to continue his Lightweight (34 entries): won by Jozef Grudzien (Poland) on points over Vellikton Barannikov (Russia) by 60–58, 59–59, 60–59, 60-58, 60-57, Referee: G. Gondre (France).

Grudzien's was the first of three successive Polish victories over Russians. British judge Ernie Tillinghurst voted them level, and, to me, he seemed nearer the mark than his four fellow adjudicators, who plumped solidly for the upright orthodoxy of the Pole. Southpaw Barannikov, a Russian reserve from outer Mongolia, had the style of an American professional, bobbing, weaving and using close, clubbing swings. There was little in it until the third, when Grudzien spurted, prodded and. I thought, got home by a fraction. Bronze-medallists were USA's Harris, who had been expected to do better but failed to penetrate Grudzien's lean-back guard, and Ireland's Jim McCourt - an excellent performance from an unexpected

Light-welterweight (35 entries); won by Jerzy Kulej (Poland) on points over Evgeniy Frolov (Russia) by 59-58, 59-58, 59-59, 60-58, 59-58, Referee: E. Jetchev (Bulgaria). Although a comparatively clear-cut victory for the more aggressive Pole, this bout drew a Western-style slow handelap. Frolov, tall, gaunt and another southpaw, seemed content to stay away from thick-set Kulej, who swung hopelessly out of reach. It could, styles. One reflected whether, had Britain's Dick McTaggart not been on the harsh end of a verdict against Kulej, he would have gone on for gold. Kulej's victory in the champion, Eddie Blay, was also something Welterweight (30 entries): won by Marian Tamulis (Russia), by 58-58, 59-59, 59-59, 59-60, 58-57 (the three judges who marked them level gave their advantage points to Kaspryzk). Referee: R. Surkein (USA).

semi-finals over Ghana's Empire Games

On paper this was the closest bout of the night, with Rome bronze-medallist Kasprzyk receiving the verdict on advantage points for style. Frankly, the judges made the best of a bad job, for there was an abundance of pawing and pushing and a lack of punching between Lithuanian Tamulis and the swarthy Pole. Olympic champion Nemecek, the Czech locksmith, made an unfortunate exit, being stopped in the second round of his second-series bout with Purhonen (Finland) because of a gashed forehead. Britain's Varley, on achievement our most proficient contestant, had two tame victories which seemed to surprise himself more than anyone, and then came unstuck against Italy's Bertini.

Light-middleweight (25 entries): won by Boris Lagutin (USSR) on points over Josef Gonzales (France) by 60-59, 60-59, 59-59, 59-58, 59-58. Referce: B. Bril

Lagutin, the best boxer on view, had the He never allowed Gonzales near him in the first two rounds, flicking out a classic left ripping right crosses. Mistakenly, and surely out of complacency, Lagutin tried to mix it in the third, was warned publicly for pulling Gonzales on to the punch, and received a cut eye for his trouble. But he still won with ease to compensate for the lack of talent on view in this once-rich and gave the German sufficient warning of his intention by telegraphing his right Schulz was down for two counts of eight and then wobbled up wearily to be told "enough" handed out to Britain's Willie Stack, whom was also on target, knocking out Rome round of their semi-final.

Light-heavyweight (19 entries): won by Cosimo Pinto (Italy) on points over Aleksey Kiselyov (USSR) by 60-59, 59-59, 59-59, 59-59. 59-59. Referce: A. Wolf (Germany).

Doubtless the judges - save Bril, of the Netherlands - were as confused as the crowd at the antics of these two rough-and-tumblers. It was a forest of forearms and fists, with only thing which swayed things the Italian's way was, perhaps, a public warning to the Russian for low-hitting. "Pinto, Pinto," chanted the alarmed Italian element in the crowd as Kiselyov somehow got through three good left hooks in the last round, but Pinto, who got up off the floor to stop Nicolov (Bulgaria) in the semi-finals, held on for his razor-thin victory. Pietrzykowski apart, the biggest light-heavy upset was the second series elimination in one round of Frenchman Bernard Thebault, my fancied

After three inside-the-distance wins, Frazier, 20-year-old scrub-topped thick-thighed negro, was confidently expected to dispose the German proved to be no choppingblock. Frazier, as we had witnessed in earlier

Sweden's strong comeback

NCE again the Olympic rule which restricts each country to one entry per event in the canoeing had the pleasing effect of spreading the overall honours among many competing nations. Sweden made a strong comeback by taking the gold in the K1 and K2; Russia won three golds, including the women's K1 for the third successive Games, while Germany, with a finalist in all seven events and two victories, were more successful here than their team-mates on the rowing waters at Toda.

Perhaps the biggest surprise on calm. from the hustle and bustle of Tokyo, was the success of the three American women padstudent, edged out representatives from Germany and Sweden when taking the K1 bronze medal behind the inevitable Russian winner Ludmila Khyedosiuk, and Rumania's Hilde Lauer.

But an even bigger shock for many of the recognised European women stars came later when the US pair Francine Fox, 15, and Gloriane Perrier, 35, nosed out the Rumanians to take the K2 silver behind the Germans, Roswitha Esser and Annemarie Zimmermann. On paper the Americans did not appear a well-matched pair but the mixture of youth and experience (Perrier was a member of the USA's 1960 team) gave a great boost to the small band of American women

In the men's kayak, Sweden's renowned Gert Fredriksson, winner of six Olympic gold medals, had a successful first Games as K1 and K2. Both produced bitterly-fought races on a damp finals day when mist shrouded nearby Mount Fuji - the only days at Sagami, where the paddlers had their own sub-village.

The 1960 Olympic K1 champion Erik Hansen, of Denmark, seemed to be holding plenty in reserve in the preliminaries, but in the final he trailed from the start and was never in the picture. The race developed into 22-year-old student from Halmstad, and

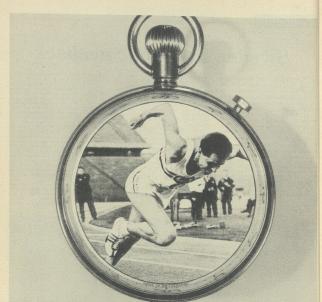

Hungary's Mihaly Hesz, with the former winning by 0.15sec in a photo-finish. Although finishing eighth (behind Hansen)

Alastair Wilson (Britain) proved that he has the spirit and determination to do better things by improving his time in each of his three races. His big problem remains, as it did for the late Ron Rhodes four years ago, how to improve with the limited opporturecruit from sea canoeing, suffers more than most, of course, by being based in Scotland.

The introduction of the spectacular K4 ing the high cost of transporting these bigger boats. Many European associations had to despatch their boats to Japan at the end of July. This, of course, had the added disadvantage of forcing team possibles to use different equipment during those last vital months before the Games.

Once in Japan, however, the organisation superb Russian four carrying off the gold RESULTS on page 49

Britain's tale of misfortune

7ORLD champions do not ORLD champions do not necessarily make Olympic gold medallists. That, above all else, even several superb performances, was the one real lesson from the seven Olympic road and track events.

In the six weeks interval between the turvy. And the outcome of the Olympic competition was that only one reigning world champion achieved the "double" by winning a Tokyo gold. For Britain, the Games were the most disappointing in recent Olympic history. No one close to the sport believed that our riders would dominate the world, yet there were indications before Tokyo and even early in the Games programme that the failure in Rome would be, to some extent, remedied. A combination of below-standard made the Tokyo Games a period which international cycling reputation. The cycling track programme had been extended to include, for the first time, a 4,000 metres individual pursuit race, bringing the track total of events to five, while there event and the other an individual race.

Italy's blue-jerseved riders took three gold medals, and five silver awards to stamp them again as the world's most powerful and in the road race, Surprisingly, their team was beaten into second place in the road time trial but other silver medals came from the individual sprint, the kilometre time trial and the individual and team

The Netherlands, Belgium, Germany and Czechoslovakia were the other gold-medal winning countries.

A special Olympic Village for the cyclists had been built at Hachioji, a textile producing that the full Olympic road and track programme was held. No previous Olympic cyclists have had the comfort and convenience of Hachioji. A cyclist literally could ride his bicycle from his bedroom on to the track and start training. The riders' quarters were linked to the centre of the cycle track by a tunnel. The Village which, together with the 400 metres cement track, was only a temporary structure for the duration of the Games, afforded facilities which most riders had never before experienced. Even so, both Italy and Russia opted out of the Village and arranged hotel accommodation locally

The track itself, erected at an estimated cost of £75,000, came in for criticism weeks before the Games started. The UCI had it inspected during the summer and made an immediate request that the surface be smoothed down as its original rough state made punctures - and consequently crashes - more than a possibility. Riders generally did not consider the track's design to be of Olympic event standard. There were many complaints of a disconcerting "ripple" on the 45 degree bankings and it was noticeable that wheel slip was one of the most frequent

Britain's bad luck was twofold in the track events. National pursuit champion Hugh Porter, obviously a fitter man than he was at the previous month's world championships, rode a comfortable qualifying trial to reach the quarter finals of the 4,000m pursuit with a time of 5min 3.16sec, the fifth fastest ride for that series. With the quarter-final draw made on the basis of fastest versus slowest, Porter was matched against Preben Isaakson, of Denmark, who

But what had started as a cold for the Briton developed into bronchitis and the evening before his quarter-final match even the normally cheerful Porter was talking of not riding the following day. But he did ride, and it was soon obvious that he was far below his best, hardly able to breath throughout the entire, testing race. He was never in the running and although he made a strong bid to reduce his deficit on the last lap, he was eliminated by Isaakson, who went on to Misfortune also struck in the team pursuit. Trevor Bull and Roger Whitfield (coming in as a substitute for the sick Hugh Porter) were matched against world champions Germany in the qualifying time trial round. This was greatly to Britain's advantage, as the superior German team would be likely to act as a spur and make Britain's riders turn out their best performance. That Germany had the upper hand from the start was never in doubt, but the British team were riding well and appeared certain to qualify.

After three of the 10 laps race, however, Brian Sandy made the error of over-running the rear wheel of Harry Jackson and, in trying to pull out, lost control of his machine Whitfield and, unable to take evasive

The team pursuit rules are that a minimum of three riders must finish the distance for a team to be given a time, but they were interpreted to mean that Britain could be allowed a re-run. Porter was not well enough to come into the team as a substitute, Sandy was badly shaken and Whitfield's injured wrist was giving him obvious pain. but both riders insisted on taking part in the re-run. It was one of the tense moments of the Games with the British foursome needing to beat the time of 4min 47,04sec by Czechoslovakia in order to qualify for the quarter

Alone on the track, with no opposition to pull out what little reserves they may have had, Britain's team just failed by 0.63sec-Later it was found that Whitfield had ridden with a fractured wrist. Those two pursuit misfortunes, coupled with mediocre rides from individual and tandem sprinters Karl Barton and Chris Church and failure by Roger Whitfield - before his spill - to approach his home form in the kilometre time trial, left Britain without success on the

For absolute excitement, although the sparse Japanese crowd at the Hachioil stadium appeared unable to appreciate the drama, the highlight of the track events was the final of the 4,000m team pursuit between the Rome winners, Italy, and the world champions, Germany,

During the first eight and a half laps-Italy had the upper hand, a smooth-pedalling team of riders who had earlier given an indication of their potential by clocking the fastest time in the qualifying round. With half a lap remaining it was impossible to judge which team had the lead; and it was fully 10 minutes before officials were able to announce the result after the most thorough scrutiny of the electrical timing apparatus.

Germany won the verdict - by seven hundredths of a second - recording the fastest time of the entire competition, 4min

In the individual pursuit, after the shock elimination of world champion Groen (Holland) by Ursi, the Italian became the favourite for the gold medal. Ursi beat Groen in the semi-final, setting a new Olympic record of 4min 56.64sec.

But in the final, Ursi's efforts to beal Groen told against him when he met Dalet (Czechoslovakia) and although the two were level for four laps, Daler then began to draw ahead and finished with more than a second to spare - and the gold medal was his

The standard of sprint racing was goodalthough riders were somewhat cramped to manoeuvre adequately on the narrow track In the all-Italian final between Pettenells and Bianchetto there was more spirit in the racing than at any other time in the series in the kilometre time trial, was the absolute

The two road events, the 68 miles team trial, and the 120 miles road race showed respectively, Britain's weakness and encouraging strength. Although nurtured or individual time trials, our riders failed to combine well as a team in the first event and finished 15th.

But in the road race, which closed the Olympic cycling programme, there was $ fire and urgency about Britain's rider which found them continually among the most aggressive throughout the event, even though in the mass finish of 100 riders they failed to gain medals.

Double triumph for Italy

ETER ROBESON and Firecrest maintained the medal-winning form which had sustained the whole British Olympic team almost every day, by taking the bronze in the Grand Prix Jumping event after an exciting jump-off on the last day of the Olympics, only a short while before the closing ceremony.

It was some compensation for a British equestrian team which had not enjoyed the best of luck, particularly in the Three-Day Event, where we were represented by Sgt Ben Jones - the first NCO to ride for Britain Bernard, Richard Meade (Barberry), the European champion, Capt Templer (M'Lord

Their troubles began in the week before the event when Barberry caught colic and was not put to work until two days before the dressage test began at Karuizawa. But our first two entries, Master Bernard and Barberry, performed very well on the first day of the dressage, which ended with Sgt Jones in the lead of the individual with 35 penalty points while Barberry's 52.67 penalties put us at the top of the team event, four points clear of Germany. After the other two had ridden on the following day, Britain was still in the lead - for the first time ever at this stage of the Three-Day. M'Lord Connolly collected 42 penalty points and Sea Breeze 54.33.

With the worst score dropped, Britain led the USA by eight points and Germany by nine while Australia, the Rome champions, disastrous performance by Stony Crossing who was as exhuberant as his rider, Brian Cobcroft, was composed and patient, and

The performance of Jones was exemplary; probably the finest dressage test this rider has ever had. Heavy rain had softened the sand arena by the time they appeared but Master Bernard scarcely put a foot wrong and only Ligges (Germany) was able to head them in the individual scoring by a mere

Although a decision of the technical committee meant that the dressage marks were much closer together than in Rome placing greater emphasis on the importance of the endurance and jumping tests - an even counting all four horses, as one should do not knowing the vagaries to come front of the USA.

The misfortunes duly arrived on the following day to both M'Lord Connolly, who eliminated after achieving maximum bonus points up to that time, and Sea Breeze, after gallantly went on until beaten by the open ditch and bank.

The course was not difficult. Indeed, some riders criticized it severely before the event possible that they were mainly critical of the jumps, which although all of standard height contained no drop fences or really places and, in the event, things turned out more difficult than many had supposed. mainly because rain made the going very

However, Meade and Barberry swept all before them for a plus score of 65.77 points and maximum bonus all the way. At the end of the day they were leading the field in the individual test, one point ahead of Checcoli (Italy) on Sunbeam, with Ligger third and Capt Moratorio (Argentina) and

Although Jones and Master Bernard had 3 rather slower run than usual, they collected her three best riders. Germany were second with 96.71 points and USA third with another bronze medal.

There were some other notable casualtiesincluding Rome silver medallist Lavis hero Bill Roycroft once found himself up ride, and he and Lutteur jumped impeccably side down under Eldorado's neck. Harry Freeman-Jackson (Eire) also had a bad Dupont (USA), also fell twice but con Australian collected eight penalties.

hopes however came on the last day when the day over the full course when Hans Meade and Barberry had a disastrous round Winkler, individual and team gold-medallist in the final show-jumping phase and collected in 1956 and team gold-medallist in 1960, 36 faults to finish eighth. Mauro Checcoli (Italy), a 21-year-old student from Bologna, rode his grey gelding Surbean to a clear round despite rattling three fences - and two gold medals, for besides taking the individual event he shared the team title with his compatriots Paolo Angioni and Giuseppe Moratorio rode Chalan into second place with a clear round after Ligges and Donkosak had surrendered a place by knocking down a fence. Two clear rounds by Michael Plumb on Gold Minstrel and Michael Page on Grasshopper secured the silver team medals citing finish in the team event.

The German Dressage Grand Prix team compensated for the disappointments by Britain was still ahead, with a penalty total by 32 points over Switzerland at the Equesof 184.67, 15 ahead of Germany and 23 in trian Park. In a flower-surrounded arena, showers, the almost impeccable Germans, Boldt on Remus, Klimke on Dux and refused three times at the 27th fence to be Neckermann, the Rome bronze-medallist, were impressive on Antoinette

The USSR was third, but their Rome a heavy fall which injured Bullen's shoulder champions, Sergey Filatov and Absent, were not very highly marked, although they went n to claim the bronze in the individual. Chamhorse gave a faultless performance while a medal by the equally slim margin of one point to Filatov. The sole British rider, Mrs Johanna Hall - one of eight women in the competition - had 743 points for 12th place, one better than her Rome position.

France won her only gold medal of the jumping champion Jonqueres D'Oriola repeated his triumph, this time on his dark bay maximum points on the steeplechase section gelding Lutteur. Germany's Hermann Schand plus-35 on the cross-country. Fencing

By C-L de BEAUMONT (President, Amateur Fencing Association) Waseda Memorial Hall, October 13-23

Honours spread around the world

TWO hundred and seventy-six competitors, representing 33 countries, were entered for the fencing events which were admirably staged in the spacious Waseda Memorial Hall in Tokyo. The attention to detail by the Japanese hosts, which was so evident in every department of the complex organization of the Games, was equally apparent for the fencing events, and as a result the competitions were completed with speed and efficiency.

Fencing, as distinct from the traditional Kendo, is a sport relatively new to Japan which probably accounted for the rather sparse number of spectators at the finals. The entry was somewhat smaller than in Rome, but all the leading world fencers were present which made the early rounds in each event a severe test. The introduction of a direct elimination stage after two rounds of pools in the individual events, leading up to a final pool of four fencers, certainly affected the first time in the 1963 world championships in Poland, is disliked by the majority of fencers and will probably be amended.

The all-important placing of competitors on the match-plan for direct elimination (and indeed the placing of the teams in the companion team event) is determined by an exact mathematical formula based on the results obtained by each fencer in the two first often produces some very unequal "draws" which of course affects the final result. It is probable that the placing of the first six competitors in each individual event at Tokyo would have been somewhat different had the normal pool system been used throughout.

The standard of fencing in the foil events was rather disappointing. Both women's and men's foil were dominated by the forceful and rather inelegant Eastern European style the other hand the epee and sabre events produced much better fencing. This time there each weapon as did Heidi Schmid, Viktor Zhdanovich, Giuseppe Delfino and Rudolf remarkable spread of fencing throughout the world - there are 65 countries affiliated to the International Federation - has produced an equal spread of candidates for international

The men's foil individual, which opened the programme, attracted an entry of 56. The holder, Zhdanovich, failed to reach the final stages. Indeed he has never reproduced the superlative form he showed in the final in among those who had reached the last eight, which would normally have formed the final. Losert (Austria), Revenu, Magnan (both France) and Franke (Poland) survived to form the final pool at the expense of Szabo (Hungary), Gerresheim (Germany), Kamuti (Hungary) and Bill Hoskyns (Britain) res-

The final was well contested. Magnan, the eigning world champion and favourite defeated Revenu 5-3 and Losert 5-2, but lost which led to the rather unexpected victory of Franke, with Magnan second and Revenu third, Egon Franke, a 29-year-old technical there are few top-class fencers, and he takes lessons from his amateur team captain. He relies on great mobility and speed of attack and proved a popular and modest winner.

The first round pools of the men's foil team event reduced the 16 teams entered to eight. In the first round matches France beat Italy 9-5, USSR beat Germany 9-3, Poland beat Rumania 9-2 and Japan created a sensation by achieving a 9-7 victory over the strong Hungarian team. In the semi-finals USSR beat France 9-6 and Poland beat Japan 9-4. France then beat Japan for third place and Germany beat Rumania by three hits for fifth place. The final match between USSR forceful than elegant and with little constructive foil play. The Poles took an early lead, but the Russians fought back and ran out winners at 9-7 when Sisikin beat Franke in the final bout by the odd hit after being

There was an entry of 40 for the women's in the preliminary stages and at the last eight Ragno (Italy) beat Juhasz (Hungary) 8-4. Mees (Germany) beat Rousselet (France) 8-6 Reito Uilaki (Hungary) beat Colombetti (Italy) 8-3 and Gorokhova (USSR) beat Masciotta (Italy) 8-7 to form the final pool. In the fence-off for fifth place, Juhasz beat

The final produced some exciting bouts. Gorokhova lost all her bouts but the other three beat each other so that a triple barrage resulted. Here Ildiko Rejto Ujlaki, the reigning world champion, imposed her undoubted class and was a clear winner beating Helga Mees (to whom she had lost during the pool) 4-0 and Antonella Ragno 4-1. Helga Mees, who fenced remarkably well, beat Ragno 4-2 for second place

From the teams entered for the women's the direct elimination stage. Hungary and Italy had byes to the semi-finals, where they six hits at 8-8, and USSR, who beat Rumania 9-4. In the semi-final matches, Hungary beat Germany 9-6 and USSR beat Italy 9-5 Thereafter Germany beat Italy 9-5 for third place and Rumania beat France 9-6. The final match was again disappointing for those who remember foil as the classic weapon. Hungary established an early lead but the Russians fought back to level the score at 6-6. In spite of four victories by Gorokhova, the Hungarians, for whom Rejto and Juhasz were in particularly good

With an entry of 65, the epee individual was perhaps the most severe event. As often lished fencers failed during the early stages. including the holder. Delfino (Italy) In the last eight, Kostava and Kriss (USSR) beat Lindwall (Sweden) and Gonsior (Poland) respectively at 10-3; Saccaro (Italy) beat high technical quality, 10-8, and Hoskyns beat Rompza (Germany) 10-5, the winners forming the final pool There was some excellent epee fencing in the final pool. Hoskyns beat Saccaro and that two barrages were necessary between third place, and in the second Grigory Kriss.

From the epee team first-round pools, which included 18 entries, USSR, Switzerland, Sweden, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Hungary defeated Austria and Switzerland beat Britain, the quarter-finals produced some USSR 8-4, France beat Germany 8-4, Italy beat Poland 9-6 and Sweden defeated Switzerland 9-1. In the semi-finals Hungary the last hit after being led 8-6 and Poland beat Germany also on hits for fifth place.

From the 13 teams entered for the sabre team event, Hungary, France, Italy, Rumania, USSR, Poland, USA and Germany reached the direct elimination stage. There Italy beat the strong Hungarian team. Hungary had won this title at the last eight In the semi-finals, Italy beat France 8-7 and USSR beat Poland 9-7 in a close fight. In the fence-off for third place Poland got the better of France by one hit at 8-8.

The final match produced some of the best fencing seen at these Games - keen decisive sabre-play with much good footwork and timing from both sides. USSR were much the more experienced side and, in spite of four the opposition and won a fine match 9-6.

The British team were somewhat handicapped by injuries, notably to Allan Jay, and epec. Nevertheless they gave a good account of themselves, the epec team proving to be the most successful. Shocks and mistakes

THE men's competition resulted in an overwhelming win for the home Japanese team, who led from the start in the compulsory exercises from their nearest rivals. USSR, and further widened the gap in the voluntaries to finish 2.5pts ahead. The Russian team was weakened substantially when Kerdemilidi, their champion, was injured just before the competition started. In third place was the combined German team, 10.35pts behind USSR, The Germans worked together in a far better spirit than in Rome and were consistently strong as a team, without producing any brilliant individual performances. Italy was fourth, pulling up from fifth place in the compulsories to beat Poland, who were the surprise of the competition. The Poles led even Germany and made a strong bid for the bronze medal during the compulsories.

The combined individual champion was a possible 120. He was outstanding and led by a full point before he fell off the pommel horse in his final exercise. In spite of this he beat his team-mate Tsurumi and the Russians Shakhlin and Lisitsky, who all shared second place with 115.40. In fifth place was Menichelli, of Italy, who produced the outthe voluntary exercises he beat everyone with six faultless exercises. Sixth was Yamashita, of Japan, and seventh was Cerar, the European champion, who threw away second place in his last exercise, on the floor, when he made several unaccountable mistakes. The two British gymnasts, Pancott and Mulhall, finished in 102nd and 115th positions respectively, out of a total of 130 competitors. They performed up to their best any of the top 10 teams.

The finals on each piece of apparatus produced some shocks and an extraordinary floor was Menichelli, whose remarkably the international judges. He beat Lisitsky and Endo, who came equal second. The rings was won by Hayata, of Japan, with Menichelli second and Shakhlin third. Endo, who led missed his dismount and finished sixth. The vault was a triumph for Yamashita, of Japan. He consolidated his lead with a nearperfect performance to beat Lisitsky into second place by 0.275pts. Rantakari, of Finland, was third.

The pommel horse was won by the reigning beyond compare both in difficulty and execution. He beat Tsurumi into second place by a full 0.20pts. Tsapenko (USSR) was by USSR - much to everyone's surprise. Shakhlin won their only gold medal in the medal. Cerar was third. Endo won his second gold on the parallel bars, after throwing away three other chances on the rings, vault and horizontal bar. He beat Tsurumi easily, and Menichelli was third. Cerar, the reigning world champion, scotched his chances by falling off shortly before his finish, and came

For the first time for many years, the medals were well spread and only Endo won more than one gold individually. In addition. it was good to see Italy, Finland and Yugoslavia sharing medals with the ubiquitous Japanese and Russiane

The women's competition was equally thrilling. USSR only beat Czechoslovakia for the team honours by the small margin of 0.901pts, after leading by 1.03 in the set exercises. It seems that the old Russian dominance here is being seriously threatened. and tremendous vitality brought so much character to the competition, were a worthy third, in front of Germany and Hungary.

The individual winner was Vera Caslavska of Czechoslovakia. She stood head and shoulders above her nearest rivals, Latynina and Astakhova of USSR. Radochla, of Germany, was fourth and Ruzickova, of Czechoslovakia, fifth. The two British girls, Denise Goddard and Monica Rutherford were outclassed by most of the teams, but worked well enough to come 71st and 77th

In the finals, Caslavska collected two more the beam and in the vault. Manina and Latynina were second and third on the shared by Latynina and Radochla. On the high and low parallel bars, Caslavska was all set to collect her fourth gold medal when she missed a pirouette off the high bar and fell the price of risking more than anyone else. Astakhova seized the opportunity to repeat her success of 1960 in Rome, while Makray, nina the bronze. The floor finals were dominated by the Russians with interesting and delightfully graceful work. The gold medal went to the reigning champion, Latynina, with team-mate Astakhova second and

The organisation of the competition was quite good. All the events ran strictly to schedule, but on both finals days the crowd were kept waiting for unnecessarily long periods between events causing flagged into Japanese-sized seats! A more serious criticism is that the organisers made very scores and placing. Thanks to the IBM computers, results were available seconds after the events were completed, but the benefits were confined strictly to the press. The electric scoreboards by each piece of apparatus were too small, not displayed nearly long enough and invisible from many parts of the stadium.

The size of the stadium was much too small, holding only 8,000. Tickets for all the finals there were several hundred empty seats, mostly in the press and official sections. It appeared that the organisers were more interested in the world television audience than the one which paid for its seats.

Finally, while the overall standard of both men and women has risen, the standard at the top of the men's competition was scarcely any better than 1960, Rome. The crowd, who were very knowledgeable and extremely critical, especially of their own team, certainly heightened the tension and may have accounted partially for the large number of bad mistakes amongst the top performers.

NB: After the competition in combined exercises, finals were held between the six best gymnasts on each apparatus to decide individual classification POMMELLED HORSE

There were other, more significant, aspects of the tournament. The bronze metal went to Australia — who had never gained to Australia — who had never gained to Australia — who had never gained as now in spite of the fact that the game is very much a minor sport back home. Even the big day itself, when the medals were at stake, was no great example of the Olympic ideal. After Australia had beaten Spain in extra time, two Spaniards tried to start a rough-house with an unpine. The India-Pakistan final was interrupted by a violent scene that had officials rushing on to the pitch to restore order before the sticks did any damage.

There is a school of thought that team games have no part in the Ohmpic consequent and the hockey tournament at Komacawa provided its share of annumition. Yet the unpleasant scenes - which, if not peculiar to team games, are certainly prevalent among the construction of the contract of headline in a Tokyo newspaper perhaps summed up the firstever Olympic judo contest as succinctly as anything: "Japanese failed in real objective - defeating Geesink," it said.

The article went on to state that although they won three of the possible four gold medals and a silver, "the Japanese team took it as though it had lost all the judo events." when the giant Dutchman, Anton Geesink defeated the local hero, Akio Kaminaga, in the unlimited weight final.

This over-dramatised the situation a little, True, they had been hoping for revenge against him ever since 1961, when Geesink stunned them by becoming the first non-Japanese to hold a world title. He beat Kaminaga then, and he did it again twice in Tokyo, before a crowd of 15,000 for whom this was obviously all the Olympics rolled into one battle. Their hopes were shattered in the Nippon Budokan Hall - a copy of an ancient princely building known as the "Hall

Geesink, who stands 6ft 6in (1.98m) and weighs about 19st (121kg) towered over Kaminaga, but the little Japanese put up a tremendous fight. Beaten first by a decision his way through four more eliminations to enter the final. Geesink had only two other fights, in which he pinned Britain's Alan Petherbridge in seven seconds and beat Boronovskis (Australia) in 12sec.

final Kaminaga seemed to be beaten when he was put down by Geesink, who is unmatched in ground judo. But the Japanese got free at the cost of half a point and then made a series of attacks to redeem himself. Although a leg-throw sent the Dutchman tumbling, mat and held for 30sec. The match lasted, in

Agility and skill counted as much as pure brawn in the lighter weights and several good overseas contestants emerged to remind the Japanese yet again that judo is spreading its boundaries rapidly. In the lightweight division the big surprise was the silver-medal performance of Switzerland's one-man team, split vote in the semi-finals before losing to the favourite, Japan's Nakatani, on points in Imin 15sec - but not until after the judges had spent 10 minutes deciding whether it was

Britain's Brian Jacks was drawn in Nakatani's group and was eliminated after losing to the Japanese but beating Rasmelungon

Korean Eui Tae Kim gave Japan's Okano a full ten-minute bout in the middleweight semi-finals during which Okano was clearly ahead but unable to end the fight. In the final, Okano met Hofmann (Germany), a judo in Tokyo, and beat him in Imin 36sec. But the German had been near to defeat in near throw to Bregman (USA) but eventually

Another one-man team, Rogers (Canada), fought his way through to the final of the heavyweight event, where he was beaten by the lighter and shorter Inokuma (Japan), who got the judges' decision for his aggressiveness

British competitors Sydney Hoare (middleweight) and Tony Sweeney (heavyweight) got no further than the preliminaries, neither winning a match. But even the most disappointed observer could not but fail to be impressed with the judo, the organisation and the popular support for the sport. The enthusiastic and knowledgeable crowds brought out the best in everybody on the mats. They were even asked publicly not to cheer too much for the Japanese alone - an admonishment these polite people scarcely

Russia again at the top

ALTHOUGH Ferenc Toerok won the individual title for Hungary, USSR regained her place as the supreme team nation in this gruelling test, while Hungary, silver-medallists in Rome, was beaten for second place this time by the USA, by only 16pts. The absence from the Hungarian trio of the 1963 world champion, Andras Balczo, it seems difficult to establish clearly, possibly cost Hungary the team title. It certainly illustrated yet again that only the Hungarians can hope to seriously challenge the only 28pts further back, while their third man, Mineyev was only three points behind Macken (Australia), who finished fourth. Hungary's other two competitors, Nagy

Entries were not as high as in Rome: 37 individuals and 11 teams, as against 45 and 17 respectively in 1960. The British trio including for the first time a civilian, Robert Phelps - scored nearly 50pts more than four years ago, but dropped two places in the team standings from seventh to ninth. Finnis was Britain's best with 194 target scores for 980pts. Fox scored 185 and Phelps 181 target scores. Despite strong challenges, Ferenc Toerok maintained his individual leadership with a 114pts advantage over Novikov and he was still ahead at the end of the swimming, although he could only finish 23rd, losing 85pts to Mokeyev in third place and 95 to Novikov. His 14min 18.7sec run for fifth place on the final day gave him an additional 30pts over Novikov, who was sixth in 14:28.4, while Mokeyev's win in 13:48.0 assured him of the bronze medal.

A 35-year-old lawyer, Ferenc Toerok fought to maintain his narrow lead in an exciting finish over the 4,000m cross-country course at the Kemigawa Playing Ground. Toerok ran himself completely out but succeeded in breaking the total-points Olympic record set by his countryman, Ferenc Nemeth, in Rome - a feat also achieved by the two following Russians.

Toda Course, October 11-15

Wayward wind has final say

THE TODA rowing course, about 15 miles from the centre of Tokyo, is not one of the world's most beautiful, being set in rather dreary countryside. Furthermore, with a cross-wind there is a definite advantage to those crews rowing in the lanes nearest to the shelter of the bank. Having mentioned these two disadvantages, be it said at once that in every other respect the whole lay-out and organization for the Olympic rowing events was quite first-class. To quote one small example of meticulous attention to detail; on the only day when rain seemed likely, two nylon raincoats were laid out in each umpire's launch.

During most of the practice period the crews had unpleasant and windy conditions to deal with, but this was probably less of a handicap to the British oarsmen than to some of the others. When our boats arrived, it was found that the four and the pair had been holed in transit, but the damage was quickly and skilfully repaired by the team's boatman, John Cork, so that the crews suffered no real loss of pratice. In any event, the pair had been most kindly given the use of a Swissbuilt boat, which they preferred to their own and in which they eventually raced.

Racing opened on Sunday, October 11, the day after the opening ceremony, in brilliant sunshine and the fine weather continued throughout the racing, except for the third day, when the weather was dull with a light cross-wind. On the finals day, the weather was again very fine, but a moderately strong cross-wind gave a definite advantage to the two most sheltered lanes and undoubtedly affected some of the results. Racing was twice postponed during the afternoon in the hope that conditions would improve. For part of the time, in fact, the wind was nearly dead ahead, giving no advantage to any particular station, but by the time of the final of the eights, which was rowed in near-darkness, the wind had backed again and the far lane once more had an advantage.

British interest was of course centred on those events for which we had entered crews: the coxswainless fours, pairs and double sculls. Webb and Cooke, who had won silver medals in the double sculls in the European championships in Amsterdam, were regarded as the best British hope, but the four which had been re-formed after Amsterdam was showing much improved pace in practice. The pair, Farquharson and Lee Nicholson, who had a good deal of international experience, were handicapped by inadequate practice time and by sickness soon after they reached Tokyo.

The British team arrived in Japan confident that they would give a good account of themselves, but fully aware of the task that faced them. In the event, their final placings - second in the fours, fourth in the pairs and seventh in the double sculls-were better than most of their supporters had dared to hope. All credit is due to them for their determination and hard work and to the ARA selectors for their decision to send a team which some critics thought had small hope of

In the coxed fours - always the first event to be rowed under international racing rules the USSR, Germany and Italy qualified for the final on the first day, while Poland, Netherlands and France joined them through their repechage heats. In the final, Germany, in the sheltered lane, won fairly comfortably from Italy.

In the coxswainless pairs, the British pair lost in their first heat to Germany by a margin of just over 10 seconds, the other first-heat winners being Netherlands, and Canada, Farquharson and Lee Nicholson were, however, successful in their repechage heat, beating USA by two seconds, and so passed into the final in company with Finland and Denmark. In the final, the Canadians had the most sheltered lane with the Finns next to them. At 500m Finland had a very slight lead over Canada, but soon afterwards they had difficulty with their steering and fell back into last place. From then on the Canadians, with the advantage of smooth water, were in the lead although a great effort by the Dutch pair brought the latter to within half-a-second of the Canadians at the finish. Germany was third, five seconds behind the Netherlands, and the British pair

The Canadians rowed a very good and confident race, but, with all respect to them, it would not be unfair to say that so inexperienced a pair could hardly have been expected to be Olympic gold-medallists had the conditions not given a considerable advantage to their station. The British pair also rowed smoothly and well and in the circumstances were perhaps unfortunate not to win a medal.

Ivanov (USSR) won his third Olympic gold medal in the single sculls. He finished surprisingly far behind the American, Spero, in his first heat, but in his repechage made sure of his place in the final. The surprise of the final was the failure of Spero, who never really got going and finished last. Hill (Germany) led Ivanov over most of the course and at 1,500m was seven seconds ahead, but Ivanov then produced his usual overwhelming finishing spurt and took the lead to win by four seconds, with the veteran Swiss sculler, Kottmann, third.

The coxed pairs were won, after a very exciting final, by the United States, who beat France by less than two seconds, with the Netherlands in third place only two feet behind France.

The coxswainless four (J. M. Russell H. A. Wardell-Yerburgh, W. L. Barry and J. J. James) were the first British crew to reach the final by beating the USA in their first heat, after being second up to the 1,500m mark. The Americans, however, also reached the final through their repechage heat, the

In the final the Netherlands led over the first half with Denmark and Great Britain lying second and third. At 1,500m the Danes had taken the lead and the United States had moved up into second place, about one length behind Denmark and very slightly ahead of Britain, who were still third but now about half-a-length ahead of the Dutch. The British four put in a great effort which took them past the Americans and they were closing up on Denmark so rapidly that for a moment it seemed that they might win. However, the Danes fought off the British challenge to win a very fine race by just over one second, with the USA in third place one second behind Britain.

The British double-scullers, Webb and Cooke, could only finish fourth in their first heat, which was won by the American double. Cromwell and Storm, in a time which win the event. The next day Webb and Cooke, sculling much more confidently, just failed by one second to qualify for the final, being beaten by the very experienced French double. Monnereau and Duhamel. In the so-called 'small finals" held to determine seventh to 12th places, Webb and Cooke beat Alwin and Bots (Netherlands) by three seconds and gained seventh place. In the final Cromwell and Storm could not hold the Russian double, Tyurin and Dubrovsky, who won by

The eights had been expected to produce a tremendous struggle between Germany and USSR - old rivals in this event - and the Vesper Boat Club crew of the USA, which the Germans had only beaten by less than halfa-second in the first heat. In the final the Germans took an early lead, with USSR and USA hanging on. The Americans had the far station, which by this time was again enjoying smoother water, and at half-way were only very slightly behind Germany. In a storming finish USA went through to beat

Asaka and Tokorozawa Ranges, October 15-20

Americans dominate... but Finns surprise

RIGANIZED by the National Rifle Association of Japan on the Asaka Range, and by the National Clay Pigeon Association at Tokorozawa, the Games shooting events were so efficiently planned that the customary supervision by International Shooting Union officials was almost a formality.

Both ranges and administration buildings, spacious, and included the statutory facilities for each competing nation. Exceeded in total only by athletics (86) and boxing (62), 57 nations competed in the shooting, whilst individual participation numbered 312, maximum entry per nation in each event being two.

As in other sports USA dominated and USSR faded. American marksmen won seven of the 18 medals and the Russians two both silvers. Similarly, records went by the board, three new world records, five Olympic, and one mark equalling the Olympic record were set. Finland surprised by winning both pistol events, and Hungary and Italy each

First record to fall was for 300m Free Rifle (shot Thursday, October 15) won by an American theological student, Gary Anderson, with 1,153, three more than the world best and 16 over the Olympic Games mark. In second place USSR's Kveliashvili (1,144) beat a compatriot's Olympic Games (Melbourne, 1956) record by seven points. Gunnarsson (USA) was placed third with 1,136, to edge the other Russian, Gerasimenok, into fourth place ahead of the Swiss world record holder, Hollenstein, in a 30-

Most popular event, with 73 shooters, was the Small-bore Rifle, prope position, 60shots at 50 metres, which was fired on Friday, October 16, in calm but very bright conditions. The Olympic record, standing at 590, was beaten by no fewer than 18 competitors, including Britain's Pete Morgan, who was placed 17th with 591 points. Four others tied the previous Olympic best and John Hall of Shenstone, Staffs, who at 57 admits he is too old for such fierce competition (though he was second in last year's European championship), was only one point short in Hungary's Laszlo Hammerl beat Lones Wigger, a US Army officer, into second place on the tie rule, each man scoring 597 points, and like bronze-medallist Tommy Pool, another US Army man who scored 596, beat the former world mark of 595 set by Holup of Hungary.

The Clay Pigeon event (51 entries) was spread over three days (October 15-17), with 200 shots in strings of 25, three each on the Thursday and Friday and two strings on the Saturday. Before the final 50 shots Mattarelli of Italy was leading with 148, Rossini (Italy) and Lira (Chile) had 147 apiece, whilst the Russian, Senichev, and on 144. Joe Wheater, shooting in his third Olympics, still had a chance with 142.

Firing in the first relay Braithwaite had a steady brace of 24s, the straight-up "bird" beating him on each occasion, to finish with 192 and in seventh place. Wheater, in the last relay, went straight on his first 25 but missed a couple in the next to total 190, placing 11th.

Mattarelli, the leader, made no mistake in breaking 50 "birds" straight with the confidence of a practice shoot to finish on 198 and set a new Olympic record. Senichev, who had been lying fifth, also scored 50 "birds" to total 194. Morris (USA) missed one in his final string and Rossini (Italy) missed one in each and tie with Senichev for a shoot-off of 25 birds each. The atmosphere was tense as the three men took position on the left of the two stands before a large gallery of public. Morris was the first to miss, then Rossini missed two. But Senichev scored a straight 25 to win second place silver for Russia, Morris (USA) winning the bronze.

Back to Asaka range, Sunday, October 18, for the Free Pistol Match: 60 shots at 50m distance; time allowance, three hours. The sky was very overcast and it rained most of the morning, causing very dim conditions in the enclosed firing-point for open-sights shooting.

It was not surprising that the world record of 566 survived and that the Rome Olympic Record of 560 was only equalled, but the winner was a surprise to most. Starting with a comparatively poor score of 90, and following with 96, 96, 94, 93 and finally 91, Vaino J. Markkanen won the gold country's first major pistol-shooting success.

The silver-medal winner, Franklin Green. was comparatively unknown internationally but he scored a steady 92-95-95-91-93-91 to give the USA yet another medal. Quite a story could be told of the third-placed Japanese, Yoshikawa, who suffered the ordeal of having Prince Akihito, heir to the Emperor, telescope 10 of his shots. Earlier a arrival of the Prince and disturbed the aim of many contestants. The Japanese shooter started with an excellent 94, drew a large gallery of the Sunday visitors (which never helps concentration), scored a brace of 89s and improved with 93, 95 and 94 to total 554 and win the bronze.

The British contingent, and especially team manager Gerald Cafferata, were well pleased with a fine shoot by Tony Chivers, whose 552 placed him fifth. An 81 and a brace of 91s dropped those few vital points to rob him of a place in shooting history. Harry Cullum, our other free pistol shooter, was not disgraced with 532 points, but it placed him 29th in an entry of 52.

Finland's second gold medal was won in the Rapid-Fire Pistol event which is perhaps the most exacting test of precision and timing in any sport. Shot at 25m range, the course comprises 60 shots, divided into series of five and broken down equally to time allowances of eight, six and four seconds. Each shot is aimed at a different target. Twelve sets of apparatus, most efficiently operated by Japanese military personnel, were no more than adequate for this increasingly popular event which attracted 54 entries. McMillan (USA), the gold medallist in Rome, was much fancied to win again.

However, it was the unknowns who topped the lists, and as in Rome a tie shoot was necessary. Seven set new Olympic records and three, including Britain's "Nobby" Clark, equalled it, he taking 10th place despite a heavy cold.

Linnosyuop (Finland) led at the half-way stage with 297 and paired it with 295 for a eight-seconds shoots, 198 in the six-seconds in the four-seconds series. Ion Tripsa (Rumania) totalled 591 to win the silver.

Nacovsky (Czechoslovakia) and Albrecht (Switzerland) tied with 590 points each, but the former easily won the tie shoot of 15 shots at four seconds exposure by 147 to 139 points to take the bronze medal.

The final match, the Small-bore Free Rifle of 120 shots at 50m, 40 shots each in prone, Tuesday October 20th. There were 57 entries but four "defected". Both the world record, set at 1,157 by USA's Anderson in the 1962 world championships in Cairo, and the Olympic record of 1,149, by Shamburkin (USSR) in Rome, were shattered Lones Wigger, in winning the gold, shot a world-record 1,164. His 398 pts prone included two ten-shot scores of 100, his best kneeling position score was another 100, and he even scored a 99 in the standing position placed ninth. Hristov (Bulgaria) trailed Wigger's ama real Hammerl (Hungary), 13d-Prone event, won the 5.71 still beat the Olympic of

Soccer

Various venues. October 11-23

No change in the status

LYMPIC soccer received a badly needed boost when 60,000 people turned up to see Hungary beat Morocco 6-0 in the first game in the National Stadium. But despite continuing good support, the 35 games in Tokyo and Osaka seldom rose above the mediocre. The battles were either too hardily-fought or too easily one-sided.

The reason was not hard to find. Five of the 14 finalists were from Eastern European countries, where Olympic teams are merely stepping-stones for players destined for higher things in the international soccer world. All five - Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Germany (represented by an East German team), Rumania and Yugoslavia - finished in the last six, and the first three named carried off all the medals.

For the most part they were opposed by countries young in the ways of technique and tactics, who displayed the obvious signs of belief that enthusiasm would suffice to overcome deficiencies in skill. Some of them, no doubt, were misled by encouraging results from friendly matches against much stronger countries during the preparations for Tokyo. Now they realize how hard the chips go down when they have to be laid on the table.

Defending champions Yugoslavia conceded a shock second-minute goal to Morocco before they got into their stride, but they were shattered in a tremendous 11-goal battle with Hungary which brought them up against Germany in the quarter-finals. The Germans, whose bruising battle with Rumania was a mockery of Olympic football, grabbed a quick lead, packed their defence, and the Yugoslavs bowed out, shortly afterwards announcing that they had no intention of trying again in 1968. Few can blame them.

A goal ahead in the first half of their semi-final against Czechoslovakia, Germany might have made it through to the final but for injury to one of their stars, Urbanczyk, in the second half, but the Czechs scored twice against the depleted team. In the match UAR's rigid 4-2-4 formation with their shooting, mainly because the UAR goalkeeper, Ahmed, proved at a loss in dealing with high centres.

Although the Hungarians had looked the "class" team from the start, the final was not very interesting. Much rain over the final two days made the National Stadium pitch very soft and a great deal of the tackling and body-work by both sides was not pleasant to see. Czechoslovakia had the discipline, particularly through Geleta and Pieman, who made their left flank very strong, but Hungary had the flair for the unexpected move and in Komora and Bene two forgoals easily beat any other individual scoring feat), he made the whole thing memorable with one quicksilver run which took him from just inside the Czech half to an angled position near their goal-area from where he unerringly drove home.

This was the second of Hungary's goals, coming in the 59th minute after Farkas had put them ahead two minutes after the interval. It deservedly won them the gold with only 10 minutes to go did the Hungarians try to close up the game - a tactic many other sides had consistently attempted with far less reason and one which more than anything succeeded in making this

Finally, one must add that the refereeing did not help. Generally speaking, officials found European players trying to attempt far too much petty retaliation. The Japanese, Fukushima, was totally unable to control a near-fight in the Hungary-Yugoslavia match and Israel's Ashkenazi, reputedly one of the more efficient, had to give 36 free kicks in the first half of the final and 24 in the second

There were, in fact, many weird decisions in many of the matches and had they been made before more soccer-knowledgeable and less polite crowds than Tokyo provided, the results might well have been finally disastrous to the game's already tenuous foothold in the Olympic programme.

A magnificent extravaganza

THERE is no way out of it. Look at it any way you like; think about individuals, make excuses, try to justify failures; yet still it all adds up to the inescapable ... this was America's swimming Games.

Here are the plain, unadomed figures. There were 13 individual championships and each country could enter three per event. So of 39 finalists, and 34 got through, Out of a maximum of 39 medias, and 34 got through, Out of a maximum of 39 medias, and 48 got through, Out of a maximum of 39 medias in these races, they wan 24; eight 190ld, eight where and eight side, which is seen as the side of the side

Only one country, Australia, succeeded in interrupting this American flood of success, interrupting this American flood of success, interrupting this American flood of success, and the success of the s

The performances were as magnificent as the setting. The National Gymnasium pool has been found from the work of the setting. The National Gymnasium pool has been found from the setting the setting and so it was from the setting and so it was found from the superstructure like sails on either side, ended down. Inside, the roof, hanging from the superstructure like sails on either side, enclosed a water-wonderland in which even the 10m high diving-board was dwarfed.

Everything was so precise. The organization was immaculate and there was an automatic judging-timing assembly which was capable of doing the work of 24 time-keepers and 20 judges. The machine could even do the work of the recording-clerk, for the results were printed automatically.

Human officials were used because, at that stage, the FINA Congress had not accepted the exclusive use of a machine, but they were supplementary and not the final arbiters. There were no rows at this Olympics over human placings. In fact, the bronze medal for the 100m free-style was awarded to Germany's Hans-Joachim Klein without Germany's Hans-Joachim Klein without finished 11,000th of a second ahead of USA's Gary Hong of the Second ahead of USA's Gary Hong of the Second ahead of the Second and the Second and

There was no dissension either about the man of the Games: Don Schollander was everybody's choice and with every possible reason. Just to watch this fair-haired 18-year-old swim was a joy. Schollander won four gold medals, and it could as easily have been six. He won the 100m and 400m free-style

While, his rivals struggled, this Valo student from Oregon (De way of North Carolina, Kansas and California) glided flortiessly to his victories. He could put the pressure on whenever he wanted and when better than in the 100m was this seen better than in the 100m was this seen better than in the 100m was this seen with 20 metres to go, he was third. But then there was 15-year-old Sharon Stouder, who won three golds and a silver, chased Miss Fraser home in the sprint and broke the minute, won the 100m butterfly in world record time, and helped towards two other world records in the 4 × 100m free-style and medley relays.

The unluckiest swimmer was Steve Clark, who was not well at the time of the American sudden-death Olympic trials. He failed to get a berth in the individual 100m free-style, but he equalled the world record with 52.9sec on the first leg of the sprint relay, which was half-a-second faster than Schollander's winning time.

The most ill-advised vag the islemed Koy Saari, who during the Olympic vitals excited from swimming to water pole and excited from swimming to water pole and cut water pole and the water pole and yet still qualified for four chief the did and yet still qualified for four style, 400m needly from and 190m free-200m team. McGregor so near brough, the fighter, did just that in her new event, the 400m medley. For the rest, only a few did better than they had done before, despite all the hard work in training.

100m free-style: Don ("I'm not really a sprinter") Schollander, of the United States, won this, the first men's title to be decided. after a dramatic battle with Britain's Bobby McGregor. In fact, the American world record-holder for 200m and 400m freestyle produced the sprint burst he said he did not possess in the last five metres where he edged ahead for the first time in the race to take the gold medal by a finger-nail in an Olympic record of 53.4sec.

McGregor, who did his fastest time (53.5). said afterwards, "I could not have swum faster," yet I wonder what he might have produced had he been in an adjacent lane stead of being split from him by Ilman and

Hans-Joachim Klein, of Germany, got the bronze medal, thanks to the electrical timing/ judging machines which showed that he was 1/1,000th of a second faster than Ilman, the fastest man in the heats and semi-finals. The surprise was the complete eclipse of the world record-holder, the unreliable Alain Gottvalles, of France, who finished fifth, 1.3sec outside his month-old world mark. And for the first time since 1952, Australia (whose Jon Herricks and John Devitt won in 1956 and 1960) failed to get even one 400m free-style: Since Schollander set world figures in the American championships in July, he (along with his team-mate. Roy Saari) was always a favourite for the 400m free style. And after his victory in the sprint, the only question was who would be second?

The first shock was the elimination of the Australian star, Bobby Windle, the world 220yd record-holder. Windle was told that 4min 20sec should be good enough to get him into the final. Unluckily, he was in the first heat with no one to push him and he half-a-second too slow. He was still apparently safe until the seventh and last heat. Then his less-fancied team-mate. Allan Wood, who had Schollander to chase, came through with a surprise 4:16.2. So Wood

Roy Saari, the only man to break 17min for 1,500m, led Schollander by one-tenth at the first 100m in the final, but it looked an 18-year-old played cat-and-mouse with the field to turn one-tenth up on Wood at 300m (3:10.5), and then swam his last 100m in 61.7 (only 1.3 slower than his first) to win by 4½ metres in a world record of 4:12.2.

The man who excelled himself was Frank

Wiegand, of Germany, who cut his own European record by 1.2sec in a heat and improved a further 2.3sec to 4:14.9 and took Wood over the last 100m.

1,500m free-style: Windle's elimination from the 400m final made his 1,500m chances appear remote, and even though he had the fastest heat time-17min 15.9 sec, an Olympic record (swimming again in heat one)-Roy Saari's month-old world record of 16:58.7 overshadowed the Australian's performance.

Yet in the final Windle went ahead at 200m and stayed there, and it was not Saari but Allan Wood who clung desperately to the leader. Amazingly Wood was just level with his team-mate in 7:50.4 at 700m and Saari had been dropped, six seconds behind. Windle inched tenths ahead at 800m and 900m and by 1,000m he was 1.3sec up on Wood, with the American second-string, John Nelson, 71 seconds back in third place. But this was the longest lead Windle held over Nelson. As the Australians fought their close battle, the 16-year-old American began his courageous challenge, which at the start seemed an impossibility but by the finish was a terrifying danger.

Nelson was 6.9sec down at 1,100m; 5.7sec by 1,200m, 4.4sec at 1,300m, and at 1,400m was only three seconds behind Windle with the now-tiring Wood third. The American boy moved even closer on the penultimate length and it seemed he was going to snatch a sensational victory, but up the last length Windle expended every last ounce of strength to hold on to the gold, though he won by only 1.3sec in an Olympic record of 17:1.7 And Saari? A sad seventh in 17:29.2, over 30sec outside his best time.

200m breaststroke: Ian O'Brien, the least fancied of the main contenders for this title except, of course, by Australians, came through to win a magnificent race in world record time (2min 27.8sec). With world record-holder Chet Jastremski (USA), three top Russians, a star German, and a nippy Nipponese in the field, the fact that 17-yearold O'Brien held the world 110yd record lost a lot of its significance.

But, from his first heat, O'Brien showed his tremendously effective technique as he took 5.8sec off the 1960 Olympic mark. In the semi-final he was down to 2:28.7, only half-a-second off the world record, and in the final he clipped this by another nine-tenths.

O'Brien was third at the 100m turn, 1.3sec behind Russia's 27-year-old European recordholder, Georgiy Prokopenko, and threetenths behind Jastremski. He did not make his effort until halfway up the last length to take the lead for the first time five metres from home. The Russian equalled the old world record and set European figures by placing second, while the greatly fancied Jastremski was only third.

The measure of progress on this stroke can be seen by the performance of Neil Nicholson, one of the late additions to the Great Britain team. He set a British best of 2:36.6 in his heat (0.6sec faster than the 1960 winning time) yet had he been able to have qualified for the last eight.

200m butterfly: The one man who did not look like living up to his reputation as a recordholder was Kevin Berry of Australia. Admittedly he won his heat and semi-final in good times, but both swims seemed an effort and of USA's Carl Robie, who was a second faster than Berry in the heats and half-a-second better in the semi-finals.

But came the day, the final session of the swimming, and Berry really flew. He turned at 100m in 60.4sec, equal second with Robie

Berry was sixth in Rome in 1960, with 2:18.5 when Mike Troy won in 2:12.8. So in four years he had improved his time by a staggering 11.9sec. In fact, the Australian second-string, Brett Hill, equalled Troy's 200m backstroke: The United States, who in mid-August did not consider they had one backstroker with a medal chance, came through to win the gold, silver and bronze.

It was 64 years since 200m was the Olympic distance for this stroke, and the record then stood at the start. Not surprisingly it was broken in the first heat, by America's Bob Bennett, bronze-medallist in the 100m backstroke in 1960. And new figures were set successively in three of the other four heats, in both semi-finals, and in the final

Graef led by two-tenths at 100m and held this to beat Gary Dilley, with Bennett again having to be content with third place. Big disappointment, in more ways than one. was the poor showing of towering Ernst fifth, three seconds outside his European was told he should have an immediate appendix operation. "Not until after to-

After the games had ended it became known that Roth nearly did not swim in this final. He was taken ill the night before and Germany were second in a European record of 3:37.2, thanks to an incredible anchor leg by Hans-Joachim Klein. His 52.4sec split, even allowing for the advantage of a flying take-over, was as great a sprint effort as any in these remarkable Games, except for those by America's Steve Clark.

Clark, on the first leg, equalled the 52.9sec world record of Alain Gottvalles of France. Amazingly, 17 of the 32 relay finalists were of 55.2 in 1960, which again, even allowing for the flying take-overs, reflects the timecutting trends of modern swimming.

4 × 200m free-style relay: Two minutes plus 1:58.1, plus 1:58.4, plus 1:55.6, equals history and represents the greatest power-States team of Clark, Saari, Ilman and Schollander in winning the historic freestyle relay in a world and Olympic record time of 7min 52.1sec.

They were the first squad to break eight minutes and they slashed 9.7sec off the world time which a United States quartet had set earlier in Olympic year. They beat Germanytwo from the East and two from the West by 14 yd and yet the Germans, too, broke eight minutes for a European record of 7.59.3.

This event, more than any other, reflected the world-wide forward surge in swimming standards. It was only in July, 1963, that Schollander became the first man to break two minutes for 200m. In this final he was two full seconds inside his world mark, of 1:57.6, while six others also broke two minutes! These six included two of the Germans, Wiegand and Klein, who were faster than all but Schollander.

The first six teams were inside USA's 1960 winning time and the Germans, with three of their Rome four again in action, were 32.5 sec faster (eight seconds a man) than four years ago.

4 × 100m medley relay: Two world records were set by the United States in this medley relay. Tom Mann, the first swimmer to break the minute for 100m backstroke, clocked 59.6sec and with Craig (69.6), Schmidt (56.8) and Clark (52.4) became the first quartet to break four minutes in beating Germany by six yards in 3:58.4. Had the American breaststroke sprinter, Craig, reproduced something equivalent to USSR's Prokopenko (66.5), the world record would have taken an even greater hiding.

Germany, whose 4:17.7 in 1960 did not get them into the final in Rome, improved 16.1 sec this time to take second place in a European record of 4:1.6. Britain's Thwaites, Nicholson, Jenkins and McGregor were eighth in 4:11.4, a time that would have won them silver medals four years ago.

Springboard diving: The United States won all three medals, yet their best diver did not take the gold. He was Frank Gorman, who held an "unbeatable" lead of 8.14 points over his team-mate, Ken Sitzberger, with only two dives to go. But Gorman did the almost unbelievable for an American, he dropped a dive he should have hit with ease. This earned him only 10.08 to the 21.28 that Sitzberger got ed, in a flash, into a 3.06 deficit.

Gorman out-scored Sitzberger on the last round, but not enough to retrieve all he had lost. And as the third American, Larry Andreasen, had also missed his ninth dive. the champion-to-be, who had been only third at the start of the final, sailed through thoroughly shaken Andreasen missed his last dive as well and was lucky to hold on to the bronze, by 1.19pts, from Germany's Hans-Highboard diving: This was probably the high early placings by divers using their greater tariff dives first. But I doubt if anyone had expected to see the eventual bronze medallist, Tom Gompf (USA), going from 25th place to 13th, back to 15th, then 22nd, and up again to 18th, and finally to third, during this phase of the competition.

The 1960 winner, Bob Webster (USA), was the steadiest, and though not as brilliant as in Rome he had not deteriorated to the extent of the 17pts difference in his scores in four years. He was one demoralised by the judging

However, the dive that nearly cost Webster his title four years ago - the 2½ back somer-sault - let him down again and enabled the take first place with three dives to go. Dibiasi was still first after the next dive but, unnerved perhaps by the realisation of the golden chance within his grasp, his last two dives were not up to standard and the wily Webster crept past to win narrowly by 1.04 marks.

Britain's Brian Phelps, bronze-medallist in Rome at 16, was not happy in this competi-tion from start to finish. He hit few of his dives to the degree of perfection to which we are accustomed. This was a great pity, for the Instead he was sixth.

Ingrid Engel performs winning dive in springboard event, but she failed in defence of highboard title

STABILIZED WHEAT GERM

Fraser's record win

100m free-style: Dawn Fraser, the only twice, got her golden hat-trick and made yet more history by winning in a Games record of 59.5sec. No man or woman has ever before won an Olympic title at three a tough record target - the 60.6sec returned by Miss Fraser on the first leg of the free-style relay in Rome in 1960. And no one bettered this time, except Miss Fraser, until the final.

The 27-year-old Australian, whose neck was in plaster for six weeks in the spring was killed, equalled her record in heat five first semi-final. In the final she went right into the lead, then brought gasps from the enthralled crowd as she did a slow open turn, instead of a fast tumble . . . because, as she said later: "I had a cold and found difficulty just out to win."

In a flash, the 15-year-old American Sharon Stouder sped round and closed up on the champion, but Miss Fraser, the immaculate technician, was away again, and though the young American swam as she never has before and gained the distinction of being only the second woman to break the minute (59,9sec), she could not catch the Queen of swimming.

Kathy Ellis, of the USA, who got into the final only as the seventh qualifier and so had to swim in an outside lane, came through to win the bronze by one second from Erica Terpstra, of the Netherlands.

400m free-style: This final, which had promised so much after the brilliant performances in the USA championships and Olympic trials, was probably the least exciting of the swimming races. The heat times were nothing to write home about by modern standards, even though Ginny Duenkel, the American third-string, and then her teammate, Marilyn Ramenofsky, had clipped two seconds, then a further nine-tenths off Chris von Saltza's 1960 Olympic record. But their 4min 48.6sec and 4:47.7 respectively did not compare with Miss Ramenofsky's world

In the final, versatile Miss Duenkel, who earlier had lost a great fight for the backstroke title, was in command. She was onefifth down on Miss Ramenofsky at 100m, but one-tenth up at half-distance and went on to win by 1.3sec in 4:43.3, four-tenths better than her USA trials time.

Dawn Fraser did not appear to have her Terri Stickles to get nearly two seconds ahead with 100m to go. Dawn pulled her back, but lost the bronze by 0.4sec. Britain's Elizabeth Long was four seconds outside her best, yet was still the top European in placing sixth in 4:52.

100m backstroke: Six of the eight girls who lined-up for this final were or had been world record-holders. There was Ginny Duenkel, of the United States, who 18 days earlier had set a world 100m record of record of 68.9sec). There was her team-mate, Cathy Ferguson, who on the same day (September 26) had broken the 200m mark and in heat three clipped the Games mark to 68.8sec. There was Christine Caron, of won the fourth heat in 68.5sec; Japan's Satoko Tanaka, and Britain's Linda Ludgrove and Jill Norfolk.

It was Caron, the over-publicized little 16-year-old "Kiki" from Paris, who was a fraction ahead at the turn. Sandwiched between the two Americans with 20m to go, she seemed to have a winning lead. And Miss Ludgrove, in lane two, appeared to be

Then fighting Ferguson started her challenge and passed the French girl to touch in a

In those last 20m Miss Ludgrove faded into sixth place (69.5sec) behind the Japanese 200m breaststroke: Europe's only golden moment in the swimming, as in 1960, came in this event, but this time a little 14-year-old robbing this continent of even that satisdeayour. In this fraction of time, midway through the last length, Miss Kolb, unconsidered as a potential medallist, sprinted her way past Britain's Stella Mitchell and Russia's Svetlana Bababina but could not quite catch the Soviet world record-holder, 15-year-old Galina Prozumenshchikova.

The tension in this first event of the Games produced many surprises . . . the climination in the heats of Australia's star, Marguerithe Ruygrok, and Germany's Wiltrud Urselmann, who won the silver medal behind Britain's Anita Lonsbrough in Rome. In the final Barbel Grimmer, of Germany, who had beaten Miss "P" in the second fastest heat time, faded into sixth place, while Dutch girl Klena Bimolt, the European silvermedallist, was only seventh.

Disappointing for Britain was the failure of Miss Mitchell and Jill Slattery to reproduce even their best times of 1964, Had they done so, they would have been second 100m butterfly: The oldest saying in sport came unstuck in this final, for the "good big 'un" did not beat the "good little 'un. Six-footer Ada Kok, the power girl from the Netherlands and world record-holder, took on 5ft 5in (1.70m) Sharon Stouder of the USA, the most bemedalled girl of the Games.

This lithe 15-year-old, who went home with three golds and a silver, was like a flying fish beside the lumbering big Dutch girl who, though she tried her hardest, just could not combat Miss Stouder's speed with her strength and good technique.

This speed gave the American a world record of 64.7sec - 4.8sec faster than the gold-Schuler, in 1960. Anne Cotterill, of Britain, was one-tenth inside Miss Schuler's time in her semi-final, yet was still six-tenths too 400m medley individual: What applied for the men applied also for the girls in this new Olympic event. The United States were superand a German did extremely well.

The pre-Games favourite and world record-holder, 17-year-old Donna de Varona Rome Games), showed her tremendous talent by leading by 1.9sec on the butterfly leg. She had increased this to 5.9sec after the backstroke, to 6.1sec after the breaststroke. Finneran in an Olympic record of 5min

The suprise was the effort of Germany's Veronika Holletz, who led America's third girl, Martha Randall, at the third change but ever, her 5:25.6 was a European record.

Britain's Anita Lonsbrough had a most promising heat in which she was seven seconds faster at 200m than ever before. But, though she showed her usual fight, in the final she could not reproduce the sparkle. Miss Lonsbrough still did her best time (5:30.5) for seventh place, but she could have won a medal.

4 × 100m free-style relay: America's quartette (Stouder 61.2sec, de Varona 60.9sec, Watson 60.7 sec and Ellis 61.0sec) averaged under 61sec to win the free-style relay in a world record of 4min 3.8sec after leading from start to finish.

Australia, thanks to an anchor split of 58,6sec by Dawn Fraser, were an easy second in 4:6.9, and the Netherlands snatched the bronze medals by one-tenth from Hungary, thanks to Erica Terpstra, who swam as never before to clock 61sec for the

The great shock was the failure of Britain, who had taken two extra sprinters just for this event, to qualify for the final. And this though only two teams were eliminated in the heats. Their 4:15.1 was but a fraction under the British best and would have gained 4 × 100m medley relay: The Soviet Union set the Olympic record tumbling in heat one, thanks to an incredible breaststroke leg of 75.2 (two seconds inside the world record) by Svetlana Babanina. They clocked 4min 39.1sec, two seconds faster than USA's winning time in 1960 and 2.5sec better than the USA second team's efforts in winning heat two.

But the final was a different story, with quite a different American team. They were sent decisively on the road to victory by their Olympic backstroke champion, Cathy Ferguson, whose 68.6sec was 0.9sec faster than Japan's Tanaka and 2.5sec and 3.6sec faster than USSR and the Netherlands respectively. This initial advantage over the Dutch proved indeed decisive for, at the finish, U.S.A. beat them by 3.1sec.

Miss Babanina kept her team half-asecond ahead of the USA on the breast-stroke second leg with a 75.3sec, with the Netherlands four seconds behind. But on Continued on page 84 butterfly Ada Kok (65sec) had levelled with the Soviet Union, while American Olympic champion Sharon Stouder (66sec) opened a lead of 2.7sec. Kathy Ellis (60.9sec) completed America's world-record effort by bringing her team home in 4:33.9. Erica Terpstra settled the fate of the silver medals with 61.3sec 2.2sec better than Russia's Britain, who beat Russia in world-record time in Blackpool in April, finished seventh, but were promoted to fifth after Germany and Hungary had been disqualified for flying take-overs.

Highboard Diving: After Frau Engel's springboard success, her retention of the highboard seemed a very easy task, but it proved quite otherwise. Lesley Bush (USA) went into the lead, by 0.80 pts, on the first dive, dropped slightly to a 0.70 advantage after two, and 0.54 after three. With every fraction of a mark counting, Miss Bush regained her original 0.80 advantage on her fourth dive, at the end of the preliminaries.

The tension remained as the German pulled back fractionally to be only 0.61 down with two dives to go, but that was the end of this enthralling battle. Miss Bush scored 17.78 on her penultimate inward 2½ somersault to Frau Engel's 15.18 for a 2½ front somersault. And though the American nearly let the gold slip through her fingers with her final 21 front somersault, which scored only 14.96, she held on to the title by 1.35 marks.

Springboard Diving: Ingrid Engel (Germany), the double diving gold-medallist in Rome, had a trouble-free run to retain her springboard title. She entered the final 2.01 marks ahead of Patsy Willard (USA) and so confident was the German that after each of her last three dives she left the pool-side to take a hot shower before returning to the fray. She won in the end by 6.64 marks from Jeanne Collier (USA), who on the final two move-ments outdived Miss Willard to snatch the silver by only 0.18 of a mark.

The start of this final was held up for nearly part were resolved. Overnight Elena Anokhina (USSR) had been eliminated because she had done a dive in a wrong position. The judges had not noticed this originally and had given her high marks. After the error had been pointed out to the British referee, the dive was re-marked and Miss Anokhina was given four noughts, a two, a three, and one eight (by the Russian judge).

The Russians protested, the Diving Committee decided she would do the dive listed just before the start of the final to see if she would qualify, and this she did. Then there was a protest on behalf of Japan's Kumiko Watanabe, who had been announced as a finalist but now was ninth and out. And in the end she too was allowed to compete.

Water Polo

Another gold for Gyarmarti

THE big four of Rome - Italy, USSR, Hungary and Yugoslavia - came through the preliminary rounds again to contest the final pool, but this time the Italian titleholders were last and Yugoslavia, fourth in 1960, narrowly missed first by goal-average.

In fact, Yugoslavia lost the gold medals in the semi-final pool in which they drew 4-4 with Hungary, the eventual winners. This result was carried forward to count also in the four-team final series. It was a remarkable game. Yugoslavia scored three times in the first quarter without reply from Hungary. Hungary levelled in the second quarter. In the third quarter, Yugoslavia took a single goal lead and it was not until 25 seconds from final time that Hungary scored their vital equaliser.

The second quarter was the telling one and Hungary's recovery was aided by their rivals who had three men sent out in less than two minutes. Mirko Sandic was Yugoslavia's "angel". He scored the first and last of their goals, but he was sent out four times for a total of eight minutes (of the 20 minutes actual play), during which Hungary got three goals, including their last equaliser.

In the final matches, Yugoslavia and Hungary each beat Italy and USSR but the Russians finished up with the bronze medals because they had beaten Italy 2-0 in the Making his fifth appearance in the Olympic water-polo final and bringing his medal tally to three gold a silver and a bronze was Hungary's great veteran 37-year-old Dezso Gyarmarti, whose first appearance was at Wembley in 1948.

Weight-Lifting

Shibuya Public Hall, October 11-18

Three years of pain pay off

THERE was a feeling of tremendous tension at the Komazawa volleyball court on the night of Friday, October 23, as the women's competition in this new Olympic sport drew to its predicted close with Japan and USSR about to battle for the gold medal. And afterwards there were scenes of wild excitement from the happy home crowd as the little Japanese girls at last obtained their country's second-ever gold in any Olympic sport.

This was a battle which had been building up all through the competition - dominating even the men's side of things. The Japanese team from Nichibo Kaizuka, a town near Osaka, supplemented with one or two other girls, had been training for three years under their martinet coach, Diamatsu. They had been beaten by USSR in the 1962 world championships but won in Moscow a year later. In Tokyo in October, 1963, they had beaten the Russians again. But the Olympic final was the one that counted. Both teams were undefeated, the Russians ping only one to Poland when Diamatsu kept his best girls out of the game because the Russian squad was watching.

It was as dramatic a final as in all the Olympics, with the Russians at first getting through with tremendously hard smashes, particularly from Ryskal and Mishak, but becoming increasingly disturbed as the agility of the hard-tumbling Japanese girls swept them back. Once the score had been levelled at 6-6 in the first set, the Russian defence began to show signs of strain and they gave best to the Japanese at 15-11.

Many changes by the Russians produced no improvement in the second set, which they also lost 15-8, and a similar defeat seemed likely in the decider until the Russians produced a mighty series of rallies which pulled them up four points and then saved match-point four times - all through Ryskal until a net touch by Mishak gave the Japanese victory at 15-13. Both finalists were the only teams to defeat Poland, who claimed the bronze medals after a surprisingly easy 15-7, 15-6, 15-8 victory over

Mention must be made of South Korea, who fielded a side at the last moment to make up the necessary six teams after the withdrawal of North Korea. They did not win a set, but without them it would not have been possible to hold the competition at USSR had a major upset and a narrow fright in successive matches before clinching the men's title. Japan provided the upset, beating the Russians 14-16, 15-5, 15-8, 15-10, after coming from 7-14 down to level the score in the first set. This virtually won them the bronze medals and they would have been even higher placed but for defeats by both Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

Unfortunately, there was no build-up towards the end, as in the women's competition, for the men's final was virtually decided in mid-week, when USSR beat Czechoslovakia 3-2 but not before a shock The Russians took the first two sets 15-9, 15-8 and it seemed all over. Then the Czechs came back strongly to take the next two 15-5, 15-10, but they seemed to lack the stamina to match their opponents and went down 15-7 in the decider. It was, however, their only defeat and they shared with the Japanese the honour of being the only teams to take sets off the Russians, who won the gold medals by a sets score of 25-5 against the Czechs' 25-10.

Zhabotinsky wins battle of "tigers"

Leonid Zhabotinsky on his way to a gold medal

TEW Olympic and world records flowed like an avalanche in the Shibuya Public Hall, venue for the Olympic weight-lifting comnetitions, and four reigning champions were swept away in its wake, in every case losing to new records. Only two of the 1963 world champions retained their titles and not one of the 1960 Olympic champions. Records started to come early in the bantamweight class and when the last barbell had finally thudded back to the platform, 136 new Olympic and 13 new world records had been registered by the busy IBM compu-

The biggest upset came as a tremendous climax to a week of dramatic, exciting duels when Leonid Zhabotinsky (USSR) jerked 4794 lb (217.5 kg) to defeat his team-mate, former world's strongest man Yuriy Vlasov. Author-poet Vlasov had established a commanding lead with a world record press of 4351 lb (197.5kg) but had to take three attempts with 358lb (162.5 kg) snatch before finally succeeding with a very shaky squat.

When he came up for his last jerk which would have easily given him the championship, Vlasov was smiling with confidence. But he was too confident and too relaxed and failed to fix his jerk. The "gentle-giant" 24-stone Zhabotinsky, seeing the gold medal the very last lift of the whole competition a new world record and a new Olympic champion with a total of 1,262lb (572,5kg). Veteran Norbert Schemansky (USA), 40. iust missed his 1,200lb (545kg) target but was a convincing third.

The rugged little bantamweight, Aleksey Vakhonin (USSR), did not allow himself to be perturbed by the lead built up in the press and snatch by Imre Foeldi (Hungary) who had unexpectedly reduced from featherweight to compete in the lower category. In fact, Vakhonin needed only two jerks to reach 78721b (357.5kg), beating the world record of 7821lb (355kg) set up a few minutes earlier by the gaunt-faced Hungarian. With only one press poundage on his score-sheet Japan's Ichinoseki fell too far behind and had to be content with third place

Japan's first gold medal of the Games was won in convincing style by featherweight Yoshinobu Miyake, with a world record total of 876lb (397,5kg), Had he not been overweight, Miyake could have claimed another world record for his 270lb (122.5kg) snatch, but it counted for an Olympic record as did his 270lb (122.5kg) press. Some compensation for his coming second was the world-record jerk of 336lb (152,5kg) by Isaac Berger (USA). Berger's faulty technique in the snatch left him 33lb (15kg) behind Miyake, too far to catch up. After lagging behind the more fancied Fukuda (Japan), Poland's Mieczyslaw Nowak finished strongly

The expected triangular battle between lightweights Waldemar Baszanowski (Poland), Marian Zielinski (Poland) and Vladimir Kaplunov (USSR) became a straight duel when Zielinski surprisingly failed two snatches and dropped to third place. Baszanowski and Kaplunov drew level after their first next six attempts. The tie was resolved by the Pole's lighter bodyweight, which gave him the title and the world-record total of 9531b

Another great upset occurred in the middleweight category. World record-holder Viktor Kurentsov (USSR) suffered very badly from nerves and made only four good lifts, finishing well below his record. Hans Zdrazila (Czechoslovakia) had two attempts to go, but in order to win the gold medal he would have to jerk the world-record weight of 3914lb (177.5kg). He succeeded brilliantly with his very last attempt. Masashi Ohuchi came pear to taking second for Japan but after failing his last two jerks was left in third Injury-stricken Gyoezoe Veres (Hungary), the defending world champion, could not reach his best form and in fact slumped to third place when both his compatriot Geza Toth and Rudolf Plyukfelder (USSR) outjerked him. Plyukfelder's lead in the press stronger in the jerk. The Russian's 1,04621b total was the highest of the 10 which all beat the previous Olympic record in the category.

Early in the middle-heavyweight competition it became apparent that Louis Martin (Britain) was far from his best form. He admitted to me afterwards that he had overtrained in the Olympic village gymnasium. Louis never overcame the 22lb (10kg) lead that Vladimir Golovanov (USSR) established in the press and an unlucky miss with his third snatch caused him to drop even further behind. It was impossible for him to catch the Russian in the jerk and Golovanov still had something in reserve when he finished with a new Olympic record total of 1,0744lb (487,5kg), Ireneusz Palinski effort to dislodge Martin from second place

Two quite good performances came from our other British lifters. Middleweight Mike Pearman set a new British record total of 854lb (387.5 kg) to finish in 14th place. Sylvanus Blackman placed 10th in the lightheavyweight division with a new British and Empire record total of 94231b (427.5 kg).

The lavish facilities in the Shibuya Public Hall and the well-co-ordinated organization of the Japanese officials kept the competition moving briskly and smoothly. The experiment of having each body-weight category competing in two separate groups was a great success. The "lesser lights" lifted each morning and without the great champions to detract from their performances were warmly cheered as a considerable number of them set new national records. The "tigers" lifted in the afternoons and were not held up, as in previous Olympic Games, by long waits for their successive lifts. This kept them warm and in good competitive condition and so the records piled up one after another.

Apart from some unsuccessful appeals by of the crowd who we fill the dy in derful climax to a western was in human lifting.

Yachting

Sagami Bay, October 12-21

Upsets in a sailor's paradise

NSCONCED in their own village, with a newly-built futuristically designed boat-house and excellently situated harbour and other facilities, yachtsmen from 42 countries and the attendant officials, boatmen and followers had a pleasant stay at Enoshima on Sagami Bay.

Only one serious incident marred the otherwise almost dight scene an argument contention and the state of the contention and th

Other gold medals went to Australia (5.5 metres), Denmark (Dragon), Bahamas (Star) and New Zealand (Flying Dutchman). But only the USA got among the medals in every class, winning two silver and three bronze in a remarkably consistent "team" performance.

Variable, fickle winds and generally small seas made sailing erratic for those usually used to less sheltered conditions. But by and large it was a fair test for those with experience of widely differing conditions, and what luck there was invariably went to the brave.

Discounting the undue optimism aroused by pre-Olympic publicity, Britain's performances were largely not less than could have been expected. Keith Musto and Tony Morgan had a tremendous series of battles against Pedersen and Wells (New Zealand) before losing the Flying Dutchman gold medal by 699pts. Making up places rapidly after a somewhat disappointing eighth on the first day, they were in a position to take a commanding lead as they sailed ahead towards the line in the penultimate race. But a fickle wind twice appeared to favour the New Zealanders' Pandora at the expense of the Britishers' Lady C. But the Danish-New Zealander Pedersen, a reserve for Denmark in the 1956 Games, had deserved his victory with three brilliant wins in four races after a very indifferent start.

For some time there was hope that Martin Parry, sailing Andromeda in the Dragons, would also be among the medals. He took the lead very early on and continued to perform with steady credit, maintaining second place until the stxth race when finishing sixth made him lose a couple of places in the overall positions. A brave, lone attempt to find Andromeda wind she needed to perform her best failed in the last race and she finished 18th. But Parry was able to discard this finish in the final tally and maintain fourth

In an extremely close finish, Denmark took the gold medal from Germany by only 28 points, with the USA third. Winner Berntsen had tied for first place on points in this class in Melbourne but had lost the gold medal on placings.

Lack of opposition in home sailing probably cost Robin Aisher a higher place than 11th in the 5.5 metres, won by Australia from Sweden and the USA. Australia's Barrenieve, helmed by Northam with two of the 1902 America's Cup-challenging Great over the him, took the lead from off finished second in another. But until the final race they were closely pursued by the USA, who also won two races.

There is no lack of competition at home in Finn sailing, but it is possibly of the wrong conditions—for Olympic challenge. Well as Brian Saffrey-Cooper sailed he could finish no better than 22nd. Wind (Dennark) was unable to keep soing his country's record set by the remarkable Paul Elvitroem who had won this class twice in succession. But he gained a bronze behind Kuhweide and Barrett (UsA).

There was no British boat in the Star class – but the gold-medalist Knowles (Bahamas) had sailed for Britain in 1948. The 1960 winner Pinegin (USSR) began with a third and a first to take the overall lead but his proposed of a double virtually disappeared when Taffum was sismasted in the third race.

Overall, the results showed an improvement for Britism on the 1960 racing in Naples Bay where we did not win a medd win any describtion in any oldy the Americans, who despite their silver and bronze showings with the control of the silver and bronze showings did not claim an expected gold. But the buggest surprise, perhaps, wast that the bugless than the silver and the silver perhaps that the silver and the silver and the first place in recent years and Privage for the silver and Privage and Privage and Privage

Outstanding individual sailor was probably Knewick, who despite the upset before his races began, maintained a consistently high standard, never finishing out of the first said. and collecting two firsts, a second and a third. Knowles also had a series of fine races with three firsts, and was obliged to take them all into account as he failed to finish in the third, but descredibly got the gold medal at his fifth

Finally, there was little but praise for the organisation, which matched the unique and splendid setting that races. The Japanese Navy professional traces, the Japanese Navy professional traces that the way technical arrangements were admirable, while the girl interpreters made the language problem virtually no problem at all.

Although most were glad to be on their way home, many yachtsmen said goodbye to Enoshima with its vast clubhouse, 200 yards of sea-frontage, mobile cranes, hoists and every other possible facility with regret at leaving such a sailor's paradise.

IXth WINTER OLYMPICS

Innsbruck, Austria, January 29 - February 9

No snow - but records fell thick and fast

Except for an occasional light flurry which quickly dispersed, no snow was visible in the streets of Innsbruck throughout the 12 days of the IXth Winter Olympic Games. Ironically, the ancient Tyrolean city experienced its mildest first week of February for 58 years.

That no event had to be cancelled was a testimonial to the work of Austrian organizers. Somehow, snow which had fallen earlier was preserved and laboriously augmented on the alpine and nordic ski courses. When necessary, bobsleigh and toboggan events were held very early in the mornings before the sun got to work on the steeplybanked runs.

For the first time in the history of the Winter Olympics, the opening ceremony was not held at an ice-rink but in the bowl of the scenic Bergisel ski-jump, thus enabling more than 60,000 to watch. A short silence was observed in memory of the British tobog-ganist, Kay Skrzypecki, and the Australian skier, Ross Milne, both killed while training the week previously. Despite this sad prelude, it was not apparent that any of the courses had become unreasonably dangerous for contestants of top international class. A best-ever entry of 1,186 competitors (986 men and 200 women) from 36 nations drew a record number of spectators - just under a million - to the competition sites, and countless millions more were able to view the highlights on their television screens through the Eurovision network.

While USSR convincingly captured the lion's share of medals, the numerical might of USA, with the largest team present, achieved comparatively few of the spoils, and the non-appearance of Switzerland in the medals-table reflected a lean era of star material in a country whose name is synonymous with winter sports

It was a notable Games for Britain, particularly in the two-man bobsleigh, where Tony Nash and Robin Dixon won our first Winter gold medals since 1952. Performances also in the speed-skating by Terence Malkin, in figure-skating by Sally-Anne Stapleford, in alpine ski-ing by Georgina Hathorn and in the biathlon by John Dent improved in each case on the highest national placings at Squaw Valley in 1960. SPEED-SKATING

The outstanding individual performer in these Garres was the blonde Russian woman, Lydia Skoblikova, 24, the only person ever to win four gold meals at one Winter Olym-Continued overleaf

pics - indeed the only person to win four individual golds at any Olympic meeting, and all in the space of four days. Her admirably relaxed style throughout bore the stamp of a master. A Michigan barber, Richard McDermott, 23, shaved a tenth-ofa-second off the men's 500m record to win the United States her only gold medal in the Games. His 40.1sec was half-a-second ahead of a triple tie for the silver, including the former record-holder, Russian Evgeniv

Endorsing official views that the new Innsbruck oval was the world's fastest track. consistent Norwegian, Knut Johannesen, 30, in the 5,000m clipping 10.3sec off the previous best set eight years before. Ants Anton, 25, won the 1,500m for USSR with a personal best time and Sweden's Johnny Nilsson, 21, triumphed in the stamina-testing long distance 10.000m.

Before a capacity audience of 11,000 in the architecturally impressive Olympic Ice Stadium, Queen Juliana saw an inspired Sjoukje Dijkstra, 22, capture her country's first Olympic gold medal in any sport since Fanny Blankers-Koen's athletics triumph in 1948. Regaining her best form at the right moment, the powerful Dutch girl received merit from six of the nine judges. The third-placed Canadian, Petra Burka, five years younger, looked heiress-apparent to the title.

A Munich architectural student, Manfred Schnelldorfer, 20, claimed the men's championship for Germany after seeing his French rival, Alain Calmat, twice fall heavily. In this event, too, one could well imagine who might be the next champion when American Scott Allen finished an impressive third just two days before his 15th birthday.

The veteran USSR partnership, Oleg Protopopov and Ludmilla Belousova, 31 and 28, respectively, turned the tables on Germany's world and European champions. Hans-Juergen Baeumler and Marika Kilius, in a thrillingly close tussle between the two best pairs to be seen for many years. The powerful Protopopov's strength in lifts and his partner's acute-angled edges were rare sights for the connoisseur.

ALPINE SKI-ING

Five of the six alpine races were staged at Axamer Lizum, some 10 miles south-west of Innsbruck. The men's downhill, over a challenging course measuring 3,120m (1 mile 1,625yd) with an overall descent of 867m (948yd), was held on the Patscherkofel mountain, near Igls. All the courses had adequate if not abundant snow, but special care seemed necessary to avoid Lizum's wooded fringes.

French and Austrian skiers monopolized the top honours. Although François Bonlieu. 26, took the giant slalom for France, and the slalom and downhill went to Austrian Josef Stiegler, 26, and Egon Zimmermann, 24, three men's events was in fact a German, Ludwig Leitner.

A unique women's double was scored by the French sisters, Christine and Marielle Goitschel, aged 19 and 18, from Val d'Isère. In the slalom Christine beat her sister by nearly a second over the two runs, with American Jean Saubert third. In the giant slalom it was Marielle's turn for a gold, and this time Christine shared second place with Miss Saubert. Austria had a "grand slam" in the downhill, Christl Haas, 20, Edith Zimmermann and Traudl Hecher leading the field in that order.

NORDIC SKI-ING Sixten Jernberg, 35, greatest langlauf skier of the post-war era, was greeted by 12,000 spectators with cheers of sentimental admiration at Seefeld when the seemingly in-defatigable Swedish veteran panted in to win the strenuous 50 km marathon in 2hr 43min 52,6sec. Also ski-ing the second leg for the winning Swedish team in the 4 × 10 km relay, Jernberg's total tally in three Olympics became four gold medals, three silver and two bronze. The Finn, Eero Maentyranta, 26, won both 15 and 30km events, while the Russian Claudia Boyarskikh, 24, was first in all three women's races, including the relay. Yet another Russian success came in the biathlon, a combination of cross-country ski-running and rifle-marksmanship introduced experiretention at Grenoble in 1968. Vladimir Melyanin, 30, was the victor.

The thrilling sight of 52 ski-jumpers soaring silently above the natural ampitheatre at Bergisel provided a spectacular finale for 60,000 entranced onlookers. The Norwegian, Toralf Engan, 27, proved supreme in the 90m event, but the Finnish runner-up, Veikko Kankkonen, 24, won the new "little" 70m jump at Seefeld, where another Norwegian, Tormod Knutsen, 32, was overall first in the nordic combination. BOBSLEIGH

Defeat of the powerful Italians in both bobsleigh contests came as something of a surprise. The British two-man boblet piloted by Anthony Nash, 27, with brakeman Robin Dixon, 28, took 4min 21.9sec for their four winning runs over the 1,500m course at Igls. This was precisely 12-hundredths of a second better than the famed Italians, Sergio Zardini and Romano Bonagura, and merited only the fourth Olympic gold medal awards ever made to Britain for winter sports. The previous winners were figure-skater Madge Syers in 1908, the national ice-hockey team in 1936, and another figure-skater, Jeannette Altwegg, in

Vic Emery's Canadian crew triumph in the four-man bob, eclipsing both Italian quartets in a quite remarkable, but none the less worthy form upset, was watched by 25,000 spectators. TOBOGGANING

Germans took all the men's singles tobogganing medals at Igls. The total winning time of Thomas Koehler, 23, over all four runs was less than three-tenths of a second faster than that of the runner-up, Klaus Bunsack. In the two-seater contest, Josef Feistmantl, 24, and Manfred Stengl, 17, scored for the host nation, but in the women's singles another German, Ortrun Enderlein, 21, defeated the world champion, Ilse Geisler.

In contrast to the forward-prone position of a skeleton Cresta rider, it was for many a new spectacle to see these luge tobogganists adopt a sitting posture, steering by skilful weight-transference and delicate control of the sharp-edged runners. This was the first lugeing to be included in an Olympic programme. Perhaps because of this, some of the less experienced competitors made it look a highly hazardous sport, while, in contrast, the Austrian and German experts seldom gave cause for anxiety.

ICE HOCKEY

Although the final table suggests that USSR won the ice hockey with plenty to spare, in fact the title was decided by a 3-2 defeat of Canada in their final game. Had the Canadians won that match the two nations would have finished equal on points, in which case by Olympic rules the victorious team in the match between the two would have been champions.

There is no question that victory was well merited by the only team to win all seven of its matches and the one with the most goals for and the least against. Keys to the Soviet success were superb fitness, which made them dominant in the final period of every match, superior skating skill which gave them quicker manoeuverability and their forwards' technique of keeping possession until the right scoring chance came.

Saxonclad know-how plus personal styling by Gordon Pirie have combined to produce this advanced conception in design. The Olympic tailored 'slim-line' suit can be used equally well for teaching or gymnastics.
